Princess Helene Demurs Over Reconciliation and Carol Takes Son To Live in Own Palace.

Carol Sends For Lupescu, London Hears

LONDON, June 9.—(U.N.)—A Berlin dispatch according to a confidential telephone message from Bucharest by way of Belgrade, Yugoslavia, King Carol, of Rumania, had charged Colonel Precop, an aide, to bring Madame Magda Lupescu to Bucharest.

BY ALEXANDER HURTING, United News Correspondent.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, June 9.—Princess Helene, who gave love and a son to Prince Carol only to see him desert them both, faced a vital decision tonight.

She could welcome back the prodigal, forgive him his long love affair with Madame Magda Lupescu in Paris, and become queen of Rumania. Or she could stand on the divorce she obtained two years ago, live apart as "princess mother" in her palace at Kisseleff, and hope for the frequent companionship of nineteen-year-old Michael, now crown prince.

All parties except the liberals were united in welcoming Carol as the newly proclaimed king, but chief interest centered on the princess and her attitude.

The king, ordered immediate prosecution of Dr. Angelescu, minister of education in the last liberal government, after he learned that Dr. Angelescu had spoken disrespectfully of him at a liberal meeting this morning.

He decreed likewise for the same reason against Dr. Kofineanu, mayor of Bucharest, and Dr. Demetrescu Brasila, former minister of health.

G. Diamandy, Rumanian minister to Paris, was recalled because of his opposition to Carol as king. It was reported several generals would be deprived of their commands for the same reason.

The situation changed with the hours. After Carol flew here to claim the throne Friday night, it was said Helene would accept a reconciliation and annul her divorce.

Then, on Sunday evening, the two met for the first time in years. They failed to agree to take things up where they had been dropped. Michael's education was entrusted to Carol, presumably after the princess' protests. The king took Michael to Cotroceni palace, while Helene remained at Kisseleff.

Yet today, after promenading through the principal streets with laughing young Michael, Carol took the boy back to Kisseleff palace and left him there with Helene. The monarch met his former wife in the presence of her mother, the former queen.

ATLANTANS PAID HONOR BY EMORY

Miss Barker and Dr. Davis Get Degrees; Arkwright Is Trustee.

Emory University's board of trustees, at its annual meeting Monday, voted to confer honorary degrees upon two prominent Atlantans and elected a third to membership in the governing body of the institution.

Miss Tommie Dora Barker, who will receive the degree of doctor of literature at the graduating exercises this morning, will be the first woman in history to be so honored by Emory University. Miss Barker recently resigned as librarian of the Carnegie Library of Atlanta, and as director of the Emory library school, to accept a position as the southeastern field secretary of the American Library Association.

The other Atlantans honored were Dr. Edward Campbell Davis, leading physician, upon whom the university raised $500,000 to bring Emory University to Atlanta in 1915, and long has been a staunch supporter of the institution.

The third honorary degree authorized by the board Monday will be conferred at a later commencement upon Dr. Elly Dee Jennings, dean of the college of arts and sciences at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas. Dr. Jennings will receive the degree of doctor of laws.

All honorary degrees at Emory must be voted, first by the president and then by the board of trustees. The degree of doctor of divinity was authorized in 1920 for Rev. John Ernest Hattaway, eminent Methodist minister of Liverpool, England, who will deliver the baccalaureate address to a class of 270 graduates at Emory this morning.

Election of three other new members of the board, in addition to Mr. Arkwright, re-election of seven trustees whose terms expired this year, and re-election of all of the present officers of the board, were features of the meeting Monday.

The other new members of the board are: W. E. Brock, Chattanooga; Rev. J. S. French, Memphis; and former Governor T. G. McLeod, of Columbia, S. C. The seven trustees who were re-elected for six-year terms are: Rev. J. H. Barnhardt, Salisbury, N. C.; L. W. Branch, Quitman, Ga.; Thomas K. Glenn, Atlanta; Rev. Isaac C. Jenkins, Lakeland, Fla.; Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, Greenville, Miss.; L. F. McCord, Jacksonville, Fla.; and Norman C. Miller, Atlanta.

The officers are: President, Charles Howard Chandler, Atlanta; vice president, Bishop V. W. Darlington, Huntington, W. Va.; executive vice president, W. D. Thomson, Atlanta; secretary, H. X. McCord, Jr., Atlanta; and treasurer, G. H. Meade.

Reaffirming Emory's traditional policy of having only intramural athletics, the board declined to grant a Hoover Group Chairman Says Education in Temperance, Not Vicious Penalties, Is Answer.

BOSTON, June 9.—(U.N.)—Large measure observance of the law can be brought about by education and persuasion rather than by force and harsh penalties, George W. Wickersham, chairman of the national commission on law observance and enforcement, declared tonight in addressing thousands of persons gathered here for the 57th national conference of social work.

Devoting a part of his address specifically to the national prohibition law, Wickersham said that since its enactment there had been no attempt at education as to its merits, that temperance work had been abandoned and that dependence for enforcement had been placed upon the power of the government to impose fines and imprisonment.

Tells of England's Success. He contrasted the success of England and Wales in bringing about increased temperance in part through education and improved recreation and suggested that the British success furnished "a very cogent suggestion to those charged with the enforcement of the 18th amendment in the United States."

Summarizing his views on means for obtaining general observance of laws, Mr. Wickersham said: "The problem of law enforcement largely is a matter of education in law observance. Preventive measures rather than penalties should be emphasized. The new education must study and teach the reciprocal duties of the state and its members. Sympathy and helpfulness, rather than the rod, the cell and the stone pile, should be tried in order that lawless men should be brought to the point of repentance and the lawless ground of how the eighteenth amendment and the legislation which carry it into effect will be about one thing is perfectly obvious, and that is, that from the enactment of the Volstead act, down to the present time, reliance upon carrying out the purpose of the amendment was placed upon the power of the government to compel by the imposition of penalties of fine and imprisonment general observance of the statute law."

Education Abandoned. "This method reached its peak in the enactment of the Jones law in March, 1920, which in effect made every violation of the prohibition laws with the exception of illegal possession and maintenance of a nuisance, a potential felony."

"No process of education or attempted education of the public into the value of prohibition to accomplish the maximum of temperance in the community was attempted during all this period. The long course of demonstration of the evils of the use of intoxicating liquor which led to the adoption of the eighteenth amendment was abandoned."

Quoting British authorities, Wickersham pointed out that marked decreases in drunkenness in England and Wales had been attributed "mainly to a general process of education of the public into the evils of excessive drinking and the advantages of every violation of the prohibition laws."

Other factors, he said, included improved housing conditions and cultural amenities, certain restrictions on the sale of liquor and higher liquor costs.

"All of this evidence," commented Wickersham, "furnished very cogent suggestion to those charged with the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment in the United States as to better methods of attaining the object and for use during the latter part of the campaign, and declared that 'they had better save it.'"

Mr. Wickersham cited authorities on the effect that laws, even when ill-advised, must be obeyed. But he pointed out that "where law is the expression of the will of a mere legislative majority and does not reflect the general views of the community, the law-making power frequently, if not generally, seeks to compel obedience by excessive penalties, although this method seldom accomplishes its object."

Other authorities, he said, demonstrated that excessive penalties were counterproductive in vengeance and that cruel provisions had not yet necessarily been effective in curbing those legislated against.

Frank Graham Named President of U. N. C.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., June 9.—(U.N.)—Frank Graham, professor of history at the University of North Carolina, this afternoon was elected eleventh president of the university, to succeed Dr. Harry W. Chase, who recently resigned to become head of the University of Illinois.

LIST OF VOTERS 'HID OUT' BY 'RING,' J. L. KEY CHARGES

Taylor Kept in Office To Prevent Candidates From Getting Copies, Candidate Declares.

Walter C. Taylor, city clerk and registrar, who was convicted of bribery recently, is being kept in office until after the democratic primary by "Woco" voters in order to prevent candidates not in the "oil ring" from obtaining copies of the registration lists, ex-Mayor James L. Key charged Monday night in an address at Bass Junior High school. In a speech at Hoke Smith Junior High school, Councilman Wiley L. Moore stated his fitness for mayor on the opinion of any Atlanta banker or business man.

Before an enthusiastic audience of ninth ward citizens, Key charged Moore with political intrigue in a trade with Al Martin and Lamar Poole, chief of detectives, and urged the voters to "send the right kind of men with me to the city hall."

"The people of the ninth ward have no business sending back to council the man who represented them," Key declared. "If they send him back with me, he is not going to have anything to do but look out of the window. I will not place him in a post of responsibility. Councilman W. V. Paul Carpenter is seeking reelection from the ninth ward, being opposed by Homer C. Foster. Key charged that Carpenter is linked up with Taylor."

Other Meetings Held. At the same time ex-Mayor Key addressed the citizens of the ninth ward, a number of other political meetings were held throughout the city. Residents of the southwestern section gathered at the Lee Street club to organize a political club. Sylvan Hills citizens heard political speeches at the Sylvan Hills Improvement club on Lockner avenue. Moore addressed a meeting at the Labor Temple, and held a mass meeting at the Hoke Smith Junior High school.

Key opened his address with the remark that he was not going to be elected if I am elected there is not room enough in the city hall for me and Taylor," and added that when he said that he was not going to be elected, he was keeping him there until after the primary," Key said. "The gang voted for him, and Moore ducked away from him. He had a majority without my aid."

"Some of the candidates have been able to get the registration lists, and others have not. That is not denied," Key said. "Mr. Womack applied for me today, and was told there was none to be had. At that time there was one in Wiley Moore's office; one in Paul Carpenter's hands; and one in Cutcheon's hands. People like Cutcheon don't get them. That's why he is kept there by Woco-Pep voters until after the election."

A contract between the four candidates for mayor in which the quartet will agree to eliminate a run-off election if one candidate does not obtain a majority will be signed in his office at 9 o'clock this morning, Key announced after the meeting. The agreement also includes dispensing with hired workers.

Confident of Victory. In referring to the agreement during his speech, Key said that he does not think there is much possibility of a run-off anyhow. "I believe I will get more votes than all of them combined," he said.

Hired political workers have been a disgrace to this city," Key said. "Not only men—but women, mothers—hire out to politicians."

Referring to Moore's platform, Key declared that those charged with the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment in the United States as to better methods of attaining the object and for use during the latter part of the campaign, and declared that "they had better save it."

Declaring that the issue between himself and Moore is clear and distinct, Key charged that "the ring is here, and they know who to follow. Who is Taylor for? Who are McCutcheon, Carpenter and Saunders for? Tell me, somebody."

A member of the audience shouted, "Wiley Moore."

"You guessed it," Key said. "Who is Taylor against? Me. Why? Because he knows I'll boot every last one of them out."

Key said that the only charge which has been against him during the campaign has been that "I levied an extraordinary tax after the war." "Of course," he said, "I levied it. I levied it because the platform is a cheap revenue stage the same. We didn't have money enough to pay the business men to meet the payroll. One of the special taxes was for Graham."

State Pins French Verdict Hopes on Telephone Calls

As in Maughan's "The Letter," contention of the defense that Mrs. French shot and killed Garmon when he insisted on entering her home early in the morning, during the absence of her husband. There were two pistols found in the room where Garmon was killed and the defense also contends that the woman shot in defense of herself.

On the other hand, according to Mr. Hudson, the state hopes and plans to prove that Mrs. French was jealous over Garmon's attentions to another woman and killed him when he told her that he was "putting her out of his life."

The French case is the first in several years where a woman has been the defendant in an important murder trial and the balliffs and sheriff's deputies serving in Judge Howard's court Monday were making the usual arrangements for a capacity crowd.

"We know just about how many to expect," J. Gordon Hardy, veteran chief deputy sheriff, said. "There are about 200 persons in addition to the regular come-and-go crowd who always expect front row seats at murder trials. And, believe me, we had better have them ready."

STATUS OF CANNON STILL UNDECIDED

Caraway Apologizes for Embarrassing Colleagues—May Recall Bishop.

BY HERBERT LITTLE,
United News Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—(U.N.)—Chairman Caraway, of the senate job by committee, today publicly apologized for having "embarrassed" his fellow committee members, Senators Walsh, democrat, Montana, and Blaine, republican, Wisconsin, in their attempt to question Bishop James Cannon, Jr., concerning his 1928 anti-Smith campaign activities.

Caraway also conveyed his regret privately to Blaine and Walsh, explaining that his statement from Jonesboro, Ark., was designed merely to discuss what he holds to be the committee's lack of jurisdiction to question political matters.

The Arkansas senator said in a press conference he still holds to this view, but that it was "unfortunate" that his statement was interpreted by others, including Cannon himself, to justify the bishop's walking out of the lobby committee hearing Thursday.

He said, however, that he realized he had been remiss as chairman in several particulars, and was sorry for this. He mentioned particularly his failure to insist that Cannon be sworn before he testified, and his failure to insist that Cannon be sworn before he testified.

Registration Lists Checking Under Way

First checking of the registration lists by the special committee named under authority of council by Mayor I. N. Ragdale to reveal any irregularities which might exist, was begun today by the committee. The committee was organized by Mayor Ragdale, and its members are: Mayor Ragdale, chairman; Herbert Choate, chairman, announced that another meeting would be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon on the second floor of the city hall, and asked any persons wishing to file a complaint with the committee be present.

Choate declared following the first session of the committee Monday afternoon that he had no statement to make as the checking had just begun.

"We are especially anxious to find any discrepancies and will appreciate the co-operation of the public in simplifying the work as much as possible," he said. "If anyone knows of any irregularities which might exist, we will appreciate being notified."

U. S. COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE MYSTERIOUS SOS

Interference With Reed's Attack on Trust Stirs Senate—N. B. C. Head Invites Reed To Repeat.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—(U.N.)—Two official investigations and an offer by the National Broadcasting Company, controlled by the Radio Corporation of America, to allow former Senator James A. Reed to repeat his radio speech attacking the "radio trust," resulted today from an anonymous source's disclosure of a third investigation.

Senator J. H. Dill, democrat, Washington, telling the senate that "miracles seemed to be happening" to prevent any obstacles in the Radio Corporation's plan to broadcast a nationwide network of stations, added that President M. H. Aylesworth, of the National Company, offered to give Reed an opportunity to broadcast his speech over the company's New York station.

"I said it was nothing to me, that he'd better make his offer to Senator Reed," Dill said.

Navy Gets Busy. If the former Missouri senator makes the broadcast, it will be over a part of the radio combination he denounced in his speech Saturday night at Sedalia, Mo. The speech was broadcast over a national network by the Columbia System, so-called "independent" chain.

The S O S caused the New York station of the Columbia chain to cut off for more than 20 minutes, during a portion of which Reed was attacking the "radio trust." The speech went on, however, on all other Columbia stations.

With the origin of the call, which presumably came from a ship if it was sent in good faith, still obscure as ever, the commerce and navy departments initiated a "radio investigation" to look up all available facts pertaining to the report which came first from the Tuckerton, N. J., station of the Radio Marine Corporation.

The Radio Marine Corporation, another activity of the radio combination, is conducting a third investigation. Dill in his senate speech pointed out that the operator of any land station equipped with a transmitter could have transmitted the S O S in any channel and sent the simple dots and dashes which caused the navy department to blanket "he air in the east."

Voicing his suspicions of circumstances which would lead him to dare to suggest that any official of the Radio Corporation or its affiliated interests would stoop to the indefensible and contemptible use of the S O S.

Dill Praises "Miracle." "I do not believe any officials did that and I want to say so frankly, but I think someone did and I believe the reaction from such a step will do the Radio Corporation far more harm than the attack had been permitted to be broadcast."

Dill cited as "another miracle" the retirement of Federal Judge Hugh Morris, of Delaware, a radio expert, who otherwise would have been called on to decide the government's suit to dissolve the recent radio merger. "The radio trust moves in mysterious ways," he said.

Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, joined Dill in calling attention to the resignation of Judge Hugh M. Morris, who would have tried the government's suit to test legality of radio unification arrangements by 10 corporations, in the district court of Delaware.

"Wouldn't the radio trust be justified in sending out an S O S when former Senator Reed began to attack them?" Norris asked ironically.

Radio Marine Report. Vice President Fannin, of the Radio Marine Corporation, announcing his inquiry, reported the following: "At 8:15 p. m., E. S. T., Saturday, June 7, Operator Charles H. Hays, on duty at the radio marine coastal station at Tuckerton, heard faint S O S signals on 600 meters, the international distress signal wave length. He was not listening to any broadcasting stations, which operate on different wave lengths than those on which marine communication is carried on."

"In accordance with the established routine followed in such cases Operator Hays notified the United States naval communications service at New York of the signals he had received. The naval authorities thereupon stopped all radio transmission. By the time the navy's radio communication and other radio transmission was resumed at 8:45 o'clock."

Operator Hays explained that owing to very serious interference from ships close by obtaining radio communication bearings in the dense fog he was unable to get the ship's call letters. He said he was not able to trace the origin of the message which Operator Hays heard but we are continuing to investigate the matter."

KILLER ESCAPES AFTERSLAYING IN SUBWAY CROWD

Entire City Aroused by "Effrontery" of Gang-land in Reaching Up Out of Its Gutter To Strike.

$30,000 IN REWARDS POSTED FOR KILLER

Jake Lingle Was Friend of Both Capone and Moran and Police Chief; "Knew Too Much."

CHICAGO, June 9.—(U.N.)—Albert Lingle, star police reporter of the Chicago Tribune, was shot dead during the noon hour today by a lone gunman in the crowded street subway that crosses under Michigan boulevard.

A few hours later $30,000 in rewards were waiting for the captor of his murderer, and police, with whom he was friendly as he was with most of gang leaders, had started an almost unprecedented man-hunt.

There was some disagreement as to the motive for the murder of "Jake," as he had become known during his 15 years of service on the Tribune.

Two Identify Picture. Deputy Commissioner of Police John Stege, a close friend of Lingle, said that pictures of Sam Hunt, known as an Al Capone gangster, had been identified by two witnesses as those of the murderer. Stege would not reveal the identity of the witnesses other than to say they were among the noonday strollers who saw the killing.

Police Commissioner William Russell, also a friend of Lingle, said he doubted that a gangster was the murderer.

"I am so stunned that I can scarcely think of a motive for this murder," he said. "I feel certain, though, that Lingle was not killed by gangsters. Had he incurred their enmity to such an extent, it would have been an easy matter for them to take him for a ride as they have taken so many others."

"His slaying has not the mark of gangland because of the great care. It is almost a miracle that his slayer escaped."

Gangland To Pay. Whoever the murderer, it seemed that gangland would pay heavily for the crime. All available men were assigned to the hunt for the slayer. Scores of suspects were arrested during the evening. For the time being, the other ten murders which have occurred during the last ten days were forgotten.

The hunt was spurred partly by the rich reward—$25,000 by the Tribune and $5,000 by the Evening Post—earlier because the murderer, if a gangster, stepped out of the underworld to kill a man who, though he was forgotten, was a friend of the underworld.

Survey of Viaduct Section Is Proposed

Members of the city planning commission Monday afternoon took under advisement a proposal of the Atlanta bond commission that a study be made of the Pryor street and Central avenue viaduct area with a view of establishing new building lines to afford additional sidewalk space.

The area includes Hunter, Alabama and Pryor streets and Central avenue. A petition for rezoning of the northwest corner of Boulevard and Robinson street to permit establishment of a business was withdrawn by the petitioners following appearance of a strong delegation opposing it. Under the ruling of the body R. W. Torres, engineer-secretary, will study the proposal to establish a new building line and will make recommendations to the commission.

Merchants along Hunter street from Whitehall to Pryor have been especially insistent that the sidewalk be widened to accommodate pedestrian traffic.

TENNESSEE PRIMARY LIST IS COMPLETED

Three Offer for Democratic Nomination for Governor; 7 for Senate.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 9.—(AP)—The dead line for the filing of petitions qualifying candidates for the Democratic primary of August 7 was reached tonight with three men qualified for the race for governor, four for the six-year junior United States senate term beginning next March, and three offering for the short senate term from November 4 to March 4.

Benton McMillin, of Nashville, former governor, qualified late today as a candidate for the short senate term. His opponents are Senator William E. Brock, incumbent, and Dr. John R. Neal, of Knoxville. Newton H. White, Giles county farmer, was qualified for the race today, but the petition was later withdrawn.

As Senator Brock's appointment will expire November 4, the election of a senator for the short term will be necessary. Senator Brock is not a candidate for the regular term. He was appointed to office by Governor Henry H. Horton to succeed the late Senator L. D. Tyson.

Dr. Neal, Representative Cordell Hull, of Carthage; Andrew L. Todd, of Murfreesboro, and David W. Dodson, of Nashville, are long-term senate candidates.

Governor Horton, L. E. Gwinn, of Memphis, and George Dunn, of Johnson City, are the candidates for governor.

Harvey H. Hannah, chairman of the state railroad and public utilities commission, seeking re-election, the only democrat qualified for that race tonight.

Primary commissioners said qualification petitions would be received until midnight tonight, and that petitions mailed at that hour would be accepted.

The list of republican candidates was believed completed today with the qualification of J. W. Stone, of Rockwood, for the railroad and public utilities commission race, and the qualification of F. Todd Mencham, of Chattanooga, as a candidate for the short senate term nomination.

C. Arthur Bruce, of Memphis, and Harry T. Burn, of Sweetwater, are candidates for the republican gubernatorial nomination. Paul E. Dwyne is seeking the party's nomination for both the long and short senate terms.

Nine Tennessee's ten members of the United States house of representatives are seeking renomination. Mr. Hull is the tenth member. His fourth district seat is sought by J. E. Mitchell, Ed W. Albright and J. P. Owen.

Record Attendance At Colored Outing

One of the largest crowds that ever attended the picnic of the Atlanta Educational, Recreation and Festival Association, negro organization of churches, schools, turned out Monday at Lakewood park for the annual outing of the race.

Favored by fair weather the outlined program was carried out in its entirety with the picnic features starting before noon. The afternoon program of motorcycle and auto races being run off without a hitch and the closely contested women's military drill at night.

The crowds were pleased by the auto races, three events in which four race cars were used and the motorcycle races in which five machines competed. Four ambulances were lined up ready for a service which was not necessary.

A Maypole dance gave the children a chance for competition. A fraternal band played music through the day and for the military drill at night which was given under the floodlights on the race track in front of the grandstand.

The park was given over in its entirety for the day to the association members and guests and the fun lasted well into the night.

CO-OPERATIVE LEADERS DISCUSS COTTON PLAN

Meeting at Capital Expected To Elect Managers and Headquarters.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—(AP)—Meeting in secret session at the offices of the federal farm board, co-operative leaders today tackled the job of perfecting the organization of a stabilization corporation which they hope by controlling the surplus to relieve the emergency in the American cotton market.

Attending today's session were most of the directors of the American Cotton Co-operative Association, the Central Marketing Agency and a few members of the cotton advisory committee which had recommended stabilization operations.

Among the matters to be determined are the election of directors and a general manager of the stabilization corporation; the selection of permanent headquarters for both agencies and the scope of operations of the new corporation.

It was regarded as a possibility that E. F. Cressmore, of Fort Smith, Ark., general manager of the co-operative association, might also be chosen for that position with the stabilization corporation.

The public utility business is inextricably bound up in the destiny of the territory it serves. It stands or falls by the growth and prosperity of the community. It has planted itself there forever. PERHAPS We Business Men should be BETTER FARMERS

Admittedly, farmers should be better business men. Farmers and their leaders agree that more businesslike methods, more system and planning on the ordinary farm, would bring widespread benefits.

But shouldn't we business men be better farmers, too?

Isn't farming a part of our business?

We believe it is. Especially here in Georgia where agriculture is and always has been the great basic industry, where so much of our wealth comes from the soil. Industry in Georgia has built up amazingly the past few years and this has brought our state greater wealth, more stable prosperity. But when crops are bad, business is bad. When Georgia's farmers suffer reverses, we Georgia business men suffer with them.

So, wouldn't it be good business for us, as business men, to make the welfare and prosperity of Georgia agriculture a part of our business? Wouldn't the rehabilitation of agriculture be hastened if Georgia's business men were better "farmers," took a greater interest in farming, assisted in any way we could in bringing about the general adoption of improved farm methods?

As this Company's lines have spread out of the cities to the smaller places and the farms, the importance of agriculture in Georgia's prosperity has been brought home to us. And we are anxious hospital, the best business men in town, the largest tax payers, stood behind it. The tax was for the benefit of the poor and unfortunate. The other special tax was levied to pay the salaries of your employees. Is that a crime? The tax rate then was $1.25. Since then, it was raised to $1.50, and the city could run and pay its debts if that gang up there wasn't taking it away as fast as it comes in.

Finance Committee Work.
Key said that Moore has been in council six years, and has been chairman of the finance committee for three years, and "he runs it to suit himself."

"Old man Ike—and I don't want to say anything against him—but he didn't know what it was all about. Moore entered into a political trade with Al Martin and Lamar Poole, involving the city and the county's business and control of the police department. They schemed around to divide on the public policies. I've promised no human being anything. They do not approach this campaign from the standpoint of business, but from the standpoint of political intrigue."

Key charged that the Prior Tire Company suddenly started selling Woco-Pep, and that this company then got more than 50 per cent of the city's tire business, and "the son of the purchasing agent got a job in the company's office."

"I won't embarrass him by telling his name, but a man stole more than $5,000 from the dairy farm and the construction department and it was hushed up. The city paid more than $3,000 out on a contract to vibrate Courtland street, and the man who audited the claim had his driveway, garage and basement paved without paying a cent for it," Key declared.

"There have been scores of instances where men trying to do business with the city have been held up and shaken down. Does any business man allow that sort of thing to go on around his business and not know it? If he does, he is too stupid."

Referring to Moore's proposal to centralize bookkeeping at the city hall, Key said "we have got to decentralize something that's been going on. They have been carrying on a centralized bookkeeping in the Southeastern Brokerage Company (firm operated by ex-Councilman Harry Roy and Jack White, his partner, who have been convicted of bribery). When I was mayor we had a system of continuous auditing and the employees didn't know when the auditor was going to drop in on them. When I left the city hall it was cut out. That bunch wants to know when the auditor is coming around."

"Budget" and Schools.
Moore's "budget" is aimed at the schools, Key said, adding that he would turn the chip over and find the bug under it. He said that the schools now have a deficit of $250,000, and that there is no way to reduce the expense except to cut the teachers' salaries, because the other items are fixed charges. "You cannot divide the school expenditures into 12 equal installments," Key said. "The teachers should be paid 12 months in the year. They cannot hibernate like bull weevils. They will not take any money out of the teachers' payroll if I get to the city hall and there isn't enough Woco-Pep between here and the gates of hell to keep me out."

"I am not running for a job. I am running to clean up the mess that elected, I will give the office my whole time and leave my business. You need honesty, integrity, courage, tact and ability with public business, and I will see the public business handled fairly and squarely in this office. The city stands humiliated and ashamed. The people have lost confidence. The only way to re-establish confidence and respect for the city is to put these people out."

"I hire no worker and I buy no vote. Every vote that comes to me will come out of the heart of the people. And with those sincere votes I will have the power of a mighty people behind me. When you elect me, I will save the city from the head charge brought about by graft."

Moore Points to Record.
Warning a large audience which had greeted his appearance with considerable applause against the circulation of false rumors during the closing days of the campaign, Wiley Moore, speaking to third ward voters at the Hoke Smith junior high school Monday night, stated his fitness for mayor on the opinion of any Atlanta banker or businessman.

"Before you make up your mind to vote against me," he said, "I want to refer you to any banker or substantial businessman in the city and if you ask one and he doesn't tell you I'm clean and straight, then I don't want your vote."

Mr. Moore followed W. H. Johnson, city warden, and W. O. Shields, who appeared as the personal representative of Ben T. Huie, James L. Key, the other candidate, and the third ward voters word that other meetings conflicted with the Hoke Smith school meeting. E. N. Hendrix presided and introduced the candidates.

Chambers of Commerce.
Recognizing "rumors" about his affiliations with the Chambers of Commerce, and by way of reply to a statement from Johnson that unemployment conditions in Atlanta today are attributable to the activity of the Atlanta organization in encouraging the importation of labor, Moore said:

"I'll admit that I am a director of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and I'll bet you there's not another candidate in the race who wouldn't have accepted nomination to the board if he had had the chance."

"I am president of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce, having been elected without my knowledge or consent. The Georgia Chamber of Commerce is purely and simply an agricultural body trying to show the farmer what he can grow and where he can best market it after it is grown. Prosperity is essential to rural Georgia—if you don't want to see more people walking the streets of Atlanta than there are today, I give my time to this organization and when I go about attending meetings I pay my own expenses."

Johnson, outlining his previous political experience, announced that he would be elected mayor, and would be the office of city warden to that of mayor. He pledged himself to the interests of the working man, and that he favored a closer relation between the mayor and all departments and an equalization of taxes on the basis of property income after deducting taxes, business and allowing for depreciation.

Business Platform.
Moore declared that he was running for mayor strictly on a business platform, and that he would be my purpose to install a modern business system, an approved budget system.

"At present," Moore declared, "when the city is in a financial straits, we allocate funds to the several departments. After the allocation is made neither the finance committee nor the city council has anything to do with the spending. If the funds so allocated are exhausted in the first six months, or the first six months of the year, the city council to the committee and asks for more funds. Unless they get it, they tell us it will be necessary to reduce salaries or cut off some employees."

"Under a budget system," the majority candidate explained, "there will be a monthly allocation so that there will be the same amount of money for each department's use in November or December as in January or March."

System Is Blamed.
"I am not blaming any of the department heads for the present state of affairs, nor am I blaming the officials. I place the blame directly on the system. And it is not my fault that this system has continued during the six years I have served the city. Some of you probably recall that I resigned as chairman of the finance committee when there were things going on that I could not need my approval to. I accepted the job again after the mayor had pledged me his full support and after a large number of bankers and businessmen appeared to me to use my ability to conserve the city's money."

"As for the schools, I would also place the blame on the budget system. The unfavorable publicity Atlanta has been receiving in the past because of school troubles would come to an end. The budget system would assure as much money as I could pay teachers in January as in August."

"Atlanta's schools never have closed, and I don't think they ever will. When I finish my term as mayor, I will be along with others, I put my name to a note for $800,000 so that the schools would not have to close down. The city has virtually taught up that slack in the budget system. The government is in better shape than it was eight years ago. We've only got an overanticipation of around $300,000, and I understand the council has an overanticipation of $1,500,000."

Street Widening Hit.
"Extensive street widening has taken up much money. I opposed the program at the time because I knew we didn't have the money to widen all of them at one time. In the last three years we have spent $800,000 widening streets. They started about five streets at one time, and not one of them has ever been completed. I told the finance committee on January 1 that we were going to complete the widening of streets, and we ought to finish those under construction by January."

"Atlanta's use of her current revenue for widening streets. It ought to be done by the assessment plan and let the people whose property is benefited pay for the improvement. Why should the city spend money collected from all the people for the benefit of a few?"

Discussing a report that employees of the construction department were being allowed to work only every other week, Moore said that when he heard this he had a talk with the superintendent of the construction department and was informed that Mayor Ragsdale had directed the department to live within its allocation.

"Donaldson, the superintendent," Moore said, "interpreted the mayor's letter to mean to cut the work of his force down."

Men Put Back to Work.
"I told him (referring to Donaldson) that the unemployment situation was such that Atlanta could not afford to lay off employees one week and work them the next. That was on May 16 and I have been advised by him since then that the men were all put back on straight time and will stay there. With the present appropriation, we hope to finish the year without shutting down any more."

Coming back to the budget system, Moore discussed it with relation to its operation in his own company.

"I know the budget system works efficiently in my own organization," he said. "We use it for everything from advertising on down and everything is based on a certain average per gallon of gas. We keep books in Atlanta, Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina and if we do that I know you can keep a central set of books in the city hall for Atlanta."

"I ask you to try a business administration for the next four years. God knows it couldn't be worse than what you have had the past four. If you go along as you are going, you are headed as straight for the rocks as a martin ever went to his gourd."

Charges Unfairness.
In an address at Bass Junior High, Homer C. Foster, candidate for councilman from the ninth ward, charged unfairness in the distribution of the registration list. Foster said:

"Paul Carpenter, my opponent, wrote every voter in the ward a personal letter, and these include those who registered only recently. So far, I have been unable to get a registration list. Carpenter must have one. Walter Taylor told me that he hoped I would be defeated."

Alderman Ben T. Huie, candidate for mayor, spoke at Hoke Smith Junior High and at the Lee Street school. Huie stressed Atlanta's need for a "full time" mayor. "The business of the city of Atlanta demands the constant, energetic and conscientious attention of a chief executive who has the ability and energy necessary to be a real leader at the city hall," Huie said.

"I do not consider the job of mayor a 'rubber stamp' job," Huie said. "If I am elected mayor of Atlanta, all the rubber stamps will be thrown into the waste basket and we will go back to the old system of personal responsibility, personal integrity and individual accountability to the public. I will not administer the affairs of the city of Atlanta as a side issue to any other business, but I will make it my business, my hobby and my recreation as long as I hold office."

Stresses School Value.
In commenting upon the city's educational problems, Huie said:

"The education of Atlanta's children is the most important function the city has to perform, second only to the protection of the life and health of the citizen. I consider it beyond controversy that Atlanta must have a first class grade and high school system. The most important thing in a school system is the teacher. I believe that the first thing the city should do with the money set aside for educational purposes each year is to provide for the payment of the salaries of the teachers for the full twelve months in the year, so that they will not be harassed and embarrassed by receiving no pay for the last three or four months of each year, and I pledge my support to such a program if elected."

No employees of the city should be expected to work efficiently with the prospect always ahead that he will be laid off or given half time, and I am thoroughly committed to a plan that will provide permanent and steady employment for all city employees throughout the entire year."

Mr. Huie referred to the agreement between himself and the other candidates for mayor to the effect that the leader in the primary should be considered elected without the necessity of a run-off campaign as indicative of the friendly personal relationship that existed between him and his opponents, stating further that there were no personal issues in the campaign so far as he was concerned, but that he based his bid for the office upon his record as a member of council and as an alderman for a number of years. He cited as evidence of a distinct service which he performed for the City of Atlanta the fact that the graft investigation that resulted in the indictment and conviction of a number of members of council was brought about as a result of charges made by him on the floor of council several months ago. He stated that immediately following these charges the matter was taken up by the Atlanta Constitution, which urged the immediate probe and conviction of a number of members of council was brought about as a result of charges made by him on the floor of council several months ago. He stated that immediately following these charges the matter was taken up by the Atlanta Constitution, which urged the immediate probe and conviction of a number of members of council was brought about as a result of charges made by him on the floor of council several months ago.

Mr. Huie further referred to his qualifications as having attended Atlanta public schools and Clemson college, and as having served as an officer in the United States army during the war. He is now a member of the 122nd Infantry, Georgia National Guard, and holds a commission as major in the United States Officers Reserve Corps.

New Club Organized.
Organization of "Little Tammany," a political club composed of voters in the southwestern section of Greater Atlanta, was completed at the Lee Street school when approximately 500 citizens held a mass meeting. A committee was appointed to draft definite working plans for the club.

Other meetings of the club will be announced at an early date, it was said. Walter W. Whittington, insurance broker, was elected president. W. W. Matthews was named secretary. The executive committee was elected as follows: Rev. William H. Faust, Dr. W. Beecher DuVal, W. W. Whittington, Thomas H. Pitts, Mrs. Chester Johnson, Hewitt Chambers and W. W. Matthews.

The club decided to center its efforts in the opening of traffic lanes into the downtown business area, including a 90-foot boulevard from the Terminal station as far south as Park and Lee streets. The city will be asked to draft plans for this project immediately, it was said.

Zack Layfield, Mott Aldridge and Jim Mader, candidates for councilman from the seventh ward, entered into an agreement for the high man to take the council seat without further contest. Other speakers included Zeke Ewell for Wiley Moore, Jim Bowden for alderman of the fifth ward, Homer C. Denton and John L. Cone for recorder.

Speakers at the Sylvan Hills club meeting included Moore, Guy Coleman, candidate for first ward alderman; Bowden, Cone, Denton, and a representative of Chambers. Neal Printup presided.

Dr. Linton Smith presided at the Bass Junior High meeting.

Philip Rosenbaum, who had announced his withdrawal from the race for councilman from the second ward, Monday reconsidered and announced that he would continue his campaign.

Mr. Rosenbaum, who is opposing Councilman Howard C. McCutcheon, said he had written J. P. Wall, chairman of the city democratic executive committee, informing Mr. Wall of his decision.

The Rainbow's End
is within Your reach

DID you ever feel so desperate you wanted to jump out of a window? That's the wrong end of the rainbow.

Ill health is a burden on body, mind and friends. But Nature never fails to signal her dangers. Lack of appetite, flabby flesh, loss of strength and skin troubles are a warning from Nature. This is her way of pleading for help.

The basic requirement for good health is rich, red blood—those vitalizing elements in the blood that build and sustain the body.

Thousands of people have a low blood count—this may be attributed "run down" systems, skin troubles, and even more serious ailments.

It is dangerous to let the blood count remain below normal.

If you desire firm flesh, a glowing complexion, energy, vitality and the blessings of health you must keep your blood in good condition.

S.S.S. has been a blessing to millions of people who have taken advantage of its wonderful medicinal properties. It gives to Nature what it needs to build you up so that your system may throw off the cause.

With an increase in the red-blood-cells, you will be on the right road to health. This is Nature's way to body power and to clear skin. Naturally, with your strength restored, it is easier to fight disease and infection; to enjoy your food and to sleep soundly. When firm flesh takes the place of that which was once flabby, you will feel strong—your nerves will become steadier—more happiness and friends will follow.

OPPONENTS ARE RAPPED BY PERRY AT WINDER

Says If People Knew Conditions There Would Be Indignant Uprising.

WINDER, Ga., June 9.—(Special.)—Declaring that "the disgraceful efforts of selfish interests to get hold of our highway fund and the manipulation of the book trusts if fully known to the people of the state would bring them to their feet with bull whips in their hands," James A. Perry, chairman of the Georgia public utilities commission, spoke here tonight to a large audience in the Barrow county courthouse.

Mr. Perry, who was born and reared in this militia district, chided one of his opponents, Speaker Richard B. Russell, Jr., who is also claimed by Barrow county, for offering for political preferment when his "father" now occupies the highest official position within the gift of the voters of the state, and for whom, for a period almost beyond the time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, the people of Georgia have been voting. He also declared that Mr. Russell should "take time off" from campaigning and marry some beautiful Georgia woman and then after having established a home it would be time enough for him to seek the governorship.

Outlines Platform.

In outlining his reasons for entering the race, Mr. Perry said: "More than for any other reason I entered this race to wrest this state from the control of road construction forces, road machinery people and the book trusts. The lieutenants of the former are supporting Mr. Holder and the same representation of the latter is supporting Mr. Carwell. Holder and Carwell have a long standing political feud, growing out of a spanking they both received as candidates for governor four years ago. Mr. Holder wasn't satisfied in the first effort and went back for his second spanking. Having lost three campaigns for governor, he then took the powerful influence of the assets of the state highway department and every other influence at his command and defeated the greatly needed legislation that has resulted in irreparable damage to the state. Not satisfied with this performance during the session of the legislature, he held on, in open violation of the law, until the highway department had been wrecked, employees unpaid for months and months with every result growing out of a badly managed political conglomeration, to the disgrace and untold damage of our state.

"I have during the past six months sought to present to the voters of the state their interest in our state affairs as stockholders and to enthrone interest in the selection of a board of directors, members of our general assembly, just as they would display in the selection of directors were they stockholders in privately owned concerns. I am glad to observe that many men of more experience, men of training who have made a success in their own affairs have announced as candidates for the house and senate.

"Too many people in Georgia have been making politics of business. We have simply been playing politics in Georgia with our cost of government increasing with each session of the legislature; increasing bureaus, commissions, boards and every other organization that makes possible for more political offices, until today we have one in every ten of those in the United States who has any gainful occupation being supported by the other nine. Such a conglomeration of bosses would bankrupt Henry Ford, the Standard Oil Company, the United States Steel Corporation or any other business in the country, and the time has come if they are not done away with and this sort of foolishness stopped that it will bankrupt our state and our nation.

Increased Appropriations.

"In the last five years the total increase, for all purposes, if the increase voted by the last legislature are finally collected, we will have an increase during this period of time of $17,000,000. Our total increase during the past 30 years has gone from $3,000,000 to approximately $37,000,000.

"I stand for school books in our public schools being published at actual cost or free, if approved by the legislature. Those useless political offices, departments, bureaus, etc., must be done away with. We must quit spending money that we haven't received and if elected I will veto any appropriation for which money has not been provided.

"When taxes have grown so heavy in the affairs of our life as to make the ownership of one's very home more or less a burden, it is high time to call a halt. Political answers for economic questions must stop. Our legislature must convene and devote six days to the week, get through with the work which I believe can be done in 40 days and adjourn just as we would if we were devoting our time to our private business.

"Not in 10 years have I observed the interest of the citizens of Georgia in the affairs of their state as at this time. The disgraceful scenes of selfish interests in an effort to get hold of our highway fund, and the manipulation of the book trusts, if fully known to the masses of this state, would bring them to their feet with bull whips and clean the state of both obstructions."

Wounded by Bandit, Motorman Improved

A. V. Hamilton, trolley car operator, of 855 Bradley avenue, who was shot shortly before midnight Sunday at the end of the McDaniel street line by a negro highwayman, was reported to be resting comfortably Monday night at the Atlanta hospital. Hospital attaches stated that his condition was not serious and that he probably would be dismissed within four or five days.

According to reports given power company officials, Hamilton was preparing to turn his car back at the end of the line when he was accosted by three negroes, one of whom began firing at him. One of the bullets struck him in the left arm, then hit his watch and glanced off into his side, inflicting a painful flesh wound. Another of the negroes rifled his pockets, obtained approximately $20 in cash and then ordered Hamilton to take his car back to town.

When he arrived at Broad and Marietta streets, Hamilton summoned assistance and was taken to the Atlanta Hospital for treatment.

RUSSELL STRESSES NEED OF ECONOMY

Outlines Platform in Opening Speech at LaGrange Monday.

LAGRANGE, Ga., June 9.—(AP)—A program of economy through simplification of the state government was offered here today to the people of Georgia by Richard B. Russell, Jr., of Winder, in the opening speech of his campaign for governor.

Citing his ten years' record in the legislature, where he has twice been speaker of the house, as evidence of his familiarity with the details of government, Mr. Russell declared that, if elected, he would be in a position to effect many changes which would result in savings to taxpayers.

"Georgia is afflicted with a multiplicity of boards, bureaus, departments and commissions that are a constant drain on the taxpayer's pocket," he said, "and are so complicated and numerous that their chief claim to distinction is their inefficiency. There are four or five departments in the capitol doing the same kind of work, and the duties of others are so vaguely defined that those in charge scarcely know what they are supposed to do."

Schools on Cash Basis.

Mr. Russell also laid considerable stress on education as the "highest and most important function of government."

"As governor of this state," he asserted, "I will devote my best efforts to placing the schools on a cash basis. Ignorance is too expensive to be tolerated, and our heritage of natural resources will slip away from us unless we educate the boys and girls of Georgia to enable them to develop our almost untouched natural wealth."

"I favor legislation which will permit the state to have the school books printed by contract and distributed to the people at cost. In cases where this is not feasible we can reduce the price of school books by creating a revolving fund to buy the books in wholesale lots for distribution at cost."

The people of this state have paid enough toll to the school book trust."

Favors Tax Revision.

Taking up the matter of taxation, the speaker said he had "consistently fought for a revision of our antiquated and broken down uniform ad valorem system of taxation."

"The last legislature adopted an income tax," he said, "and I favor the abolition of the state ad valorem tax on land and the substitution of a more just and modern classification tax."

"Only through classifying property for taxation, and thereby reaching the intangibles, and by limiting the rate and field of taxation of the counties and municipalities can we secure any relief."

Mr. Russell saw prospects of improvement in developing Georgia's highway system.

"I have consistently opposed a bond issue in this state for highway purposes," he said, "and the published plans of the highway department under the new administration justify me in this, as it is now apparent that a system can be constructed without plunging the state in debt. I am also opposed to the policy of requiring the counties to participate in building highways."

Mr. Russell devoted a large part of his address to refuting what he said were statements of other candidates that his would be a "schoolboy administration."

Mr. Russell's speech was delivered in the Troup county courthouse, Judge W. T. Tuggle having adjourned the city court of LaGrange for the speaking. Representative M. U. Mooney, of Troup county, presided, and B. J. Mayer, a LaGrange attorney, introduced the speaker. The arrangements were in the care of Representative Raymond W. Martin, of Troup.

Preacher Inquiry Meeting Delayed

Lack of a quorum Monday night prevented a council committee from probing further into the fees paid G. Lloyd Preacher, architect, on the $2,700,000 school construction program and erection of Atlanta's new city hall.

Alderman G. Everett Millican, chairman, set 7:30 o'clock Monday night, June 23, as the time for the next session, and ordered all witnesses to appear at that time.

ONE-PARTY SYSTEM ATTACKED BY ARNOLD

Republican Chairman Indicates Possibility of Full Ticket.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 9.—(AP)—Prospects for a republican state ticket to oppose the democrats in this year's election were indicated here today in a statement by James W. Arnold, chairman of one of the two republican central committees. He said also that the party might enter candidates for United States senator and for congressmen from several districts.

J. T. Rose, collector of internal revenue in Atlanta and head of the other republican faction, when informed of Mr. Arnold's statement, said there had been discussions regarding possible candidates but that no decision had been reached, so far as he knew.

Mr. Arnold named M. O. Dunning, collector of customs at Savannah, as the probable republican candidate for United States senator.

Mr. Arnold expressed the opinion that there would be a candidate for governor and perhaps several other state offices on the republican ticket.

Statement by Arnold.

His statement follows:

"At this time has come for Georgians again to take their once-coveted place in national affairs. A one-party system is as detrimental to a state as a one-crop system is to agriculture.

"The glory of Georgia's statesmanship lies in the names of Hill, Toombs, Stephens, Lamar, Johnson and Cobb. These men were separated in two political parties, the whigs and the democrats. The sentiment that effervesced from the great conflict of the '60s overshadowed the principles which had theretofore divided these men into two political camps and Georgia became a one-party state. That conflict is over. The glorious achievements of our fathers, the courage and enduring of our mothers during those dark and tragic days have given to us a heritage as rich in sentiment as ever adorned the brow of a grateful people. We should be sorely lacking in that higher and finer spirit if we ever failed to keep that sentiment fresh in our hearts.

"But we have been back in the Union for two generations. We are doubly proud of the part we played in the Spanish-American and World wars. There is not a spot in this great Union of States more loyal to this government than Georgia. Then why should we stand aloof, purely upon sentiment, and deny Georgia the right to stand four-square with Ohio, Indiana and New York in shaping the policies of this great government? What is the reason or sense for holding on to a one-party system and thereby starving the ambitions of young men who wish to become proficient in national affairs?

"We have been swept into the maelstrom of world statesmanship. What part will Georgians play in that great theater? What chance will a Georgia boy have under this antiquated one-party system to nourish the urge to become a national figure? The democratic party in Georgia today is as far from the ideals of Thomas Jefferson as the east is from the west. With two strong major political parties in Georgia today, the political appetites of the ambitious young men would be whetted to study along the lines of economic and industrial statecraft. But, as it is, why should a young man while away his time in serious search for solutions of the economic conditions that confront the Georgia ship of state? When he can join all the fraternal orders in the country and then to cap the whole works, join some popular and strong church denomination? That's the way it's done in Georgia today.

"No wonder the old ship of state has drifted from sand bar to sand bar for two generations, and today lies anchored in the stagnant waters of bankruptcy unable to proceed under its own steam. No wonder that the real property of this state is taxed almost to confiscation. No wonder there is grave doubt as to whether the common schools of this state will be able to open their doors next fall. No wonder that our highways are and have been the joke of the nation. No wonder that we have no efficient system of managing the affairs of our state or any political subdivision thereof. No wonder that our candidates for the great office of governor seriously go about the country debating whether the gubernatorial should buy her tomato soup from a chain or home-owned store. No wonder that we have no adequate tax system.

"The state has lost its balance wheel, and we will never regain that prestige of efficiency in government until we rid ourselves of that prejudice that stands as a shameful monument to a one-party system. Yes, we are going to put candidates in the field and we are going to the people with issues, too."

UNITED FRONT SEEN.

Efforts to locate Arnold in Atlanta Monday night for elaboration of his statement were unsuccessful, and other leaders of the party declined to enlarge upon it.

These leaders also declined to indicate what progress had been made by the committee named at the meeting in Macon last week to effect a combination between the differing elements in the party in the state, but it is generally taken for granted that the announcement of Arnold presages the early announcement of agreements on a single state organization, in place of the two named at the convention held in Atlanta in April.

Nominations Approved.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—(AP)—The nomination of Wallace Townsend to be United States attorney, and of George L. Mallory to be United States marshal for the eastern district of Kansas, were approved today by the senate judiciary committee.

U. S. Seizes Sardines In War on Price Fixing

NEW YORK, June 9.—(AP)—Seizing 5,000 cases of sardines, the federal government today inaugurated a war on alleged price-fixing by Norwegian packers and shippers of the tiny fish. The seizure was made at the warehouse of Chr. Bjelland & Company, Inc., fish importers.

The government alleges that in January, 1929, all sardine packers in Norway entered into a compact to fix prices and thereafter have exacted compliance with their rate schedules under threats of boycott.

Israel B. Osofsky, special assistant to the attorney-general, declined to say what further action would be taken, but declared the case had been

"I always recommend Palmolive ...for a very good reason"

says LINA CAVALIERI

Former opera star, now a celebrated Parisian beauty specialist

Unless the pores are freed of impurities, dirt, oil, make-up, serious blemishes appear. Olive oil, in soap, removes these accumulations gently and safely.

LINA CAVALIERI! Romantic figure in the world of opera; important figure, today, in the world of beauty culture. Born in Rome, Mme. Cavallieri was singing in opera in the great cities of Europe and America by the time she was 18. Today, she has turned to beauty culture, with salons not only in Paris, but in the smartest hotels of Europe's most fashionable resorts: The Hotel Carlton, Cannes; the Hotel Roseaire, Biarritz; Hotel de Paris, Monte Carlo, and another shop—opened last summer—at Le Touquet.

"Madame Cavallieri's approval of Palmolive Soap is doubly important... one might even say triply. For she speaks not only as a beauty expert and a former opera star but also as one of the world's most beautiful women. Therefore, when she finds Palmolive 'safe, soothing, healthy for the skin' every woman must listen with interest.

Madame Lina Cavallieri's treatment

"Before retiring, of course, use Palmolive. Massage its lather gently into the skin of face and throat. Rinse with warm water, gradually changing to cold. Then, I advise the application of my Camphorated Jelly No. 5.

"In the morning, cleanse the skin thoroughly with this same soap. Then use my 'Lotion Onctueuse' No. 7 before applying my cream No. 2 for neutral skins.

"By following this simple treatment, you will keep that school-girl complexion."

Go to the outstanding beauty specialists in any of Europe's leading cities—in any American city—and you will find every one of them recommends Palmolive Soap. A total of more than 19,800 professional beauty specialists advise their patrons to use this soap in preference to any other—for bath as well as face. Why?

Palmolive is made of the oils of palm and olives, famous for generations as the greatest natural cosmetic oils. Its color is the natural color of those same oils. It requires no heavy perfumes to mask rancid fat odors. Vegetable oil soaps are safest, most soothing, gentlest on the skin. Follow Lina Cavallieri's advice—use Palmolive.

Here is professional approval that means something. More than 19,800 of the world's beauty experts advise Palmolive.

Retail Price 10c

"Ordinary soaps may cause serious irritation: if you have the mistaken notion that soap may harm your skin, it is because you are not using the right soap. Next time try Palmolive. I heartily advise it... to keep skin smooth and lovely."

of government legislation and the success of carrying it through without certification is noteworthy, the influence exercised by the legislature on the executive is not less remarkable. Part IV deals with the Indian administrative system, a special chapter being devoted to the northwest frontier province, where wild tribesmen, always ready to loot the surrounding peaceful and rich areas, have recently given renewed trouble.

Part V takes up matters of public finance, and Part VI the growth of education by which a definite increase in literacy percentages is being secured. The opinion is expressed, however, that to achieve the ends in view governments will have to devote themselves for a long period to come to the tasks of reforming the organization and administration of this vital service.

Part VII, the concluding part of the commission's first volume, is an estimate of public opinion in India, and contains the final paragraph quoted above in which it is believed some Indian elements will see promise of recommendations for a greater advance in the direction of home rule.

SCHOOL BOARD HOLDS JUNE MEETING TODAY

Revision of Budget Will Be Considered This Afternoon.

The regular monthly meeting of the Atlanta board of education will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the city hall, with revision of the budget for operation of the school system for the remainder of the year scheduled as the most important business.

Completion of the budget and its submission to Mayor I. N. Ragsdale this week for his signature of approval was predicted freely in city hall circles.

With the additional $125,000 which has been promised in the October finance sheet to care for salaries through November, the board would be only about $200,000 short of having enough funds to operate the entire year. It is predicted that the board will anticipate the needed funds and that the mayor and council will take the necessary steps to secure them the latter part of this year.

Mayor Ragsdale has indicated he will not sanction any budget which does not contemplate operation of the schools for the entire year.

Veterans of Legislature Will Compose New Senate

Sharp Contrast to the House Where Many New Faces Will Be Seen.

BY FRANCIS W. CLARKE.

That the next state senate will be composed largely of veterans legislators is revealed in reports to The Constitution giving the lists of candidates in the various senatorial districts.

The complexion of the senate will therefore be in sharp contrast to that of the house of representatives, as named at the September primary, as reports of the candidate lists, published in Sunday's Constitution, showed that at least a third of the members will be new, without former legislative experience, with the possibility of the new faces equaling the hold-overs.

This prospect results from the large number of members of the present house who are not offering for reelection, and the stiff opposition being faced by many of those who are seeking to be returned.

On the senate side, the picture is reversed, notwithstanding that under the rotation plan, a few senators must give way to men from other counties in their districts. While, therefore, the faces of the great majority of the next senate will be new, as compared with the make-up of the present body, the entry lists reveal that a minimum of two-thirds of the new men will have had former service, either in the senate or the house, and that in all but two or three of the other districts former senators are among the leading candidates.

It would not be at all surprising from the lists as reported by The Constitution if the primary of September 10 did not name a senate in which were included only two or three who had not had legislative service.

In fourteen of the state's fifty-one senatorial districts, members of the present house of representatives are running without opposition. These districts are the second, ninth, eleventh, thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth, twenty-second, twenty-third, thirty-third, thirty-ninth, forty-fourth and fiftieth.

In four of the districts—the twentieth, twenty-fourth, twenty-seventh and forty-eighth—only unopposed candidates are running, all these candidates being either senators now or former members.

In 11 districts all of the candidates are either members of the present house or have had former service in the legislature, so that whoever is nominated would mean the adding of still another veteran to the ranks of the next senate. These districts are the fourth, sixth, twelfth, nineteenth, twenty-second, thirtieth, thirty-second, thirty-fifth, forty-second, forty-third and forty-fifth.

Additional lists of candidates for the house from counties not appearing in the list published in The Constitution Sunday, further indicate that the next house will contain a larger percentage of new blood than has followed any primary in recent years.

Classes Possible.

Thus it would appear from the information gained by the analysis of the candidates' lists for both the house and the senate that the two bodies of the legislative branch of the state government might find themselves at loggerheads, especially if the house, having lost many of its leaders to the senate, should find itself confronted with a strong minority, or possibly a majority, of new members filled with ideas at variance with those of the veterans comprising the senate.

In which event the new governor, whoever he may be, will be faced with the necessity of trying to bring about needed governmental reforms with a progressive house and a standstill senate.

All of which, of course, is speculative, pure and simple, for the new members of the lower house might be more conservative than those whom they succeed—and the veterans of the house who will form the majority of the next senate might overnight, so to speak, have a change of heart as regards the consolidation of statehouse departments and other suggested acts which received the cold shoulder at the last session of the legislature.

The lists of the candidates in the senatorial districts of the state and the counties which, under the rotation plan, will this year name the senators, are as follows:

1st District (Bibb County).
Dr. J. O. Strickland.
2nd District (Liberty County).

GRAND JURY RESUMES INQUIRY TODAY

Witnesses in Tampering Investigation Called by Boykin.

The grand jury's investigation into alleged jury tampering with particular attention being paid to alleged "unbarring" of jurors and prospective jurors of the Walter C. Taylor case is to be resumed today.

Solicitor-General John A. Boykin announced Monday that he had assigned two of his assistants, Ed A. Stephens and John H. Hudson, to direct the prosecution of Mrs. Peggy French, who goes on trial for the murder of John S. Garmon today and that he and his third assistant, J. Walker LeCraw, would direct the activities of the grand jury.

Today is routine day with the grand jury and the alleged jury tampering will not be gone into until all of the routine business has been disposed of.

The grand jury is expected to hear a number of witnesses who have been summoned by the solicitor general and also to discuss with Walter McElreath, chairman of the citizens' committee which sponsored the investigation into city hall graft, concerning the possibility of that committee aiding the grand jury financially in its investigation into jury tampering. Significantly, three of them license inspectors in the office of City Clerk Taylor, already are under indictment for conspiracy as a result of the tampering probe. Taylor was convicted two weeks ago of bribery and is under sentence to serve a year on the chain gang.

The grand jury last week sent a committee to the county commissioners asking an appropriation of $5,000 to continue the tampering inquiry. Its request was referred to Edward H. Imman, chairman of the finance committee, and Walter Stewart, chairman of the public committee, the county board, who have not yet made reports on the proposal.

Bullard Replies To Harrison Card

In a reply issued Monday to the statement made Saturday by the campaign committee of Controller General Harrison, in which the position was taken that a change might result in the reorganizing of the department, B. M. Bullard, also a candidate for comptroller general, says that since only three men have held the office in fifty years there should be a change.

Mr. Bullard's statement in part is as follows:

"Since the comptroller general's office has been in the hands of only three men for the last half century, General Harrison and his father before him, no one except himself has had the opportunity to prove his ability to fill the position. A fair inference of his statement is that he is the only one capable of holding the office."

I deny that Mr. Harrison is the only man in Georgia capable of filling the office and I further deny that the office should be taken out of the hands of the people and entailed to Mr. Harrison or to anyone else.

For fifty years the comptroller general's office has opposed any change in the ad valorem tax system and has always said it is the fairest system to be had for the people.

Two years ago I ran for this office on a tax platform and many citizens throughout the state told me they favored a change of the ad valorem tax and tax system. I am nominated and elected I will not wait, but will immediately call together in conference the best brains and tax experts of the state to work out and draft a scientific tax law to be presented to the legislature when it goes in office, to replace the present system that is bearing so heavily on farm lands and other real estate."

B. M. BULLARD.

Canadians Deported By U. S. Authorities

Two Canadians left Atlanta Monday night for their native land under deportation proceedings instituted by federal authorities. Immigration Inspector F. E. Boerner, of the Atlanta office, is in charge of the deportation party and will deliver the two aliens to Windsor, Canada.

Harry Mitchell Bedard was released from the Atlanta federal penitentiary Monday after serving time on a charge of smuggling whisky. Bedard's deportation was based on the ground that he was likely to become a public charge. Walter Harold Stewart Cockrell was sentenced to serve 12 months on the chain gang on a state court had check charge, and his sentence was commuted for deportation.

Immigration officers said that Cockrell is wanted by the Canadian authorities.

'Ironides' Photos Received by Duggan

The state department of education has received from Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, U. S. N., of the "Old Ironsides" committee, 4,000 lithographs of the famous frigate "Constitution," for the preservation of which funds have been raised throughout the country.

Admiral Andrews requested that the pictures be distributed to Georgia schools.

Dr. M. L. Duggan, state superintendent of schools, said Monday that a picture would be sent to any school asking for it, if the request is accompanied by postage.

Dr. Duggan returned Monday morning from Atlantic City, N. J., where he has been attending a conference of superintendents of education of the southern states. He will leave Atlanta tomorrow on a tour of Georgia summer schools. The trip will last about six weeks.

Woman Without a Country

Widowed by a tragedy in Georgia Mrs. Mary Burton, 22, and her two children, Barbara, 5, and Edward, 3, find themselves without a country they can call home. After her husband had been killed in a highway robbery in Georgia last February Mrs. Burton tried to get a passport to return to her old home in Australia where she had married Mr. Burton, an American citizen. This was refused because the Australian government said she lost her Australian citizenship when she married. The United States government, on the other hand, says that since she was born in England she is an English citizen while England takes a position similar to Australia's. The son born in America is regarded as an American citizen; the girl, born in Australia, as an Australian. It's all very confusing and at the present time Mrs. Burton is in San Francisco where the Traveler's Aid Society is making efforts to straighten out the various difficulties so she and her children may have a homeland.

Railroads Increasing Outlay, Clift Says

Capital expenditures by American railroads for the first three months of 1936 were practically $100,000,000 more than for the same period of 1935, according to statement of A. E. Clift, president of the Central of Georgia.

Mr. Clift says he was asked by the president of the United States last December to help revive general business by curtailing their capital expenditures for the same period of 1935, and they have more than fulfilled their pledge.

Capital expenditures cover money spent for new equipment and for additions and improvements to railway property. These expenditures for the first quarter of 1936 totaled $23,771,000, or $6,653,000 more than expenditures for the same period of 1935. For the same period of 1935, expenditures for the same period of 1935, for roadways and structures $45,225,000 more was spent in 1936, while $51,428,000 more was spent for equipment in the first quarter.

Discussing the ability of the railroads to continue their contribution to the general business cycle through judicious expenditures, Mr. Clift says: "The ability of the railroads to finance such expenditures as these, as well as the continued program of improvement in future must always be determined by the public. If the railroads are treated on the basis of sound economic principles, if they are permitted to earn a fair return on their investment, if they are not overtaxed, if there is no discrimination against them and in favor of competing forms of transportation, they can move forward with greater usefulness to the public."

Festival Is Planned By Georgia Masons

Joint celebration of the 25th anniversary of the Masonic home at Macon and the annual observance of St. John's Day will be participated in by the Georgia Masons on June 24.

The occasion will mark the launching of an intensive campaign to provide funds for repairs and improvements on the Masonic home.

Hugh W. Taylor, grand master of the state lodge, will be assisted in the campaign by Charles L. Bess, past grand master; A. G. Miller, chairman of the home board of trustees; Frank F. Baker, grand secretary of the grand lodge, and F. O. Miller, superintendent of the home.

More than 200 children are being cared for at the home at present and more than two-score are on the waiting list. Enlargement of present facilities must be cared for if the waiting lists are to be cleared, Grand Master Taylor explained.

SMALL PEACH CROP FORECAST BY JONES

Shipment From Eight States Estimated at Less Than 13,000 Cars.

The total shipment of peaches expected from eight southern states this season Monday was estimated at "less than 13,000 cars," by A. D. Jones, head of the state bureau of markets.

This is an exceptionally low figure, he said, but should work to advantage of the peach growers. Higher prices will prevail than in several years, according to Jones, and the opportunity to move Georgia peaches into the west will be provided.

The Arkansas crop, usually a large one, was so badly damaged by cold earlier in the spring that practically no shipments will be made, Mr. Jones said, thus opening a new field for the Georgia variety.

The market bureau director also stated that his department Monday has inaugurated a new service to peach growers and others interested in the peach industry, the service to continue throughout the peach season. F. O. B. prices, carlot shipments, destinations and general market news and prices from the larger markets will be given, the daily statement to be prepared in the Macon office of the bureau.

Federal and state inspection of the peach orchards and shipping points was started Monday also. Inspectors visit each orchard and determine whether federal and state regulations regarding size, grading methods and packing are observed.

The peak of the peach season will not be reached this year until July, Mr. Jones said, although a few carload lots are moving now.

30,000 Shriners Open Meeting At Toronto

TORONTO, Ontario, June 9.—(AP)—A wreath-laying ceremony at Toronto's war memorial, demonstrations at the exposition grounds by young cadets and girl athletes, and a dozen other parades and patrol drills through the city streets, marked the official opening today of the international Shrine convention.

Thirty thousand Nobles already were on hand and hundreds of other belated pilgrims were en route to the festivities that have turned Toronto momentarily into a city of oriental splendor.

Hotels are crowded to overflowing, private homes have been thrown open to accommodate the visitors, and hundreds are making their homes in Pullman cars parked on special railroad tracks near the exposition grounds.

Mayor Wemp welcomed Imperial Potentate Leo V. Youngworth and the visiting Shriners in city hall plaza after the potentate had placed a wreath before the cenotaph, erected in memory of the fallen soldiers of the United States and Canada.

A crowd that filled the square to capacity stood with bowed heads as bands played the national anthems of the United States and Canada.

Twelve thousand Toronto cadets and 2,000 girls staged a demonstration in the afternoon at the exposition grounds, transformed into an oriental garden for the convention.

On Peaches To Begin

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.
The state marketing bureau today inaugurated its annual market news service for the benefit of Georgia peach growers.

Daily lists of prices of peaches, car lot movements, destinations and general market information from all large eastern cities are included in the bulletin, which will be continued until the peach movement ceases about August 1. The bulletin will be mailed from marketing headquarters in Milledgeville.

Arthur Jones, director of the bureau of markets, also said that for retail and station inspection of orchards visited all shipping points and orchards to see the regulations and packing and shipping of peaches are observed.

The peak of the peach movement is expected in July, Jones said. With a crop of good quality in prospect, he said growers should get the best prices in several years. Information indicates that less than 13,000 cars of peaches will be shipped this season by Georgia, North and South Carolina and Tennessee. This is a small crop, Jones said, and will work to the advantage of the grower through increased prices. Arkansas, usually a competitor of Georgia in peach production, will ship practically no peaches this year because of the early start in the season, Jones said.

Selling Is Continuation Of Saturday's Movement

BY CLAUDE A. JACGER,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

NEW YORK, June 9.—(AP)—Curb shares began under severe selling pressure today, most of the important shares closing 2 to 15 points lower, and several reaching new lows for the year.

The selling was in continuation of the movement which set in on Saturday, and was regarded by many as a continuing of the liquidation by professional operators who accumulated long lines of stocks on the accumulation six weeks ago in expectation of a new upturn. Bear selling also appeared to be in large volume.

The utilities, which attracted a considerable following on Natural Gas and such issues as Electric Bond and Share, American Superpower, American Gas, United Light and Air Standard, and Power and Light lost 2 to 4 points. Niagara Hudson appeared to meet better than average support, and closed off only 5-8.

In the industrials, Deere was again under heavy selling pressure, breaking about 9 points to a new low. In the active trading, Aluminum Co. dropped 10 points, and A. C. Smith 15. A technician broke more than 6 points to a new low at 44, and American National sold a couple of points.

Some of the investment trusts were hard hit, particularly securities Corp. and a new stock, which lost more than 10 points. Trans-America dropped 3 points to another new low, in sympathy with the continued sagging bank stocks, and Goldman Sachs trading sagged moderately to another new minimum.

Among the oils, Coudon dropped more than 5 points, and Gulf and Humble 4, Standard of Indiana and Houston, and Cities Service sagged 3-4 of a point.

PAN-HELLENIC DANCE CLOSES TECH COMMENCEMENT

Miss Broyles and Mr. Faisst Leaders of Grand March

The all-night Pan-Hellenic ball, brilliantly staged last evening at the Georgia Tech gymnasium, brought to a close the commencement dances of the institution, which have centered the interest of college circles since last Thursday. The grand march was led by Miss Susan Broyles, with Harold Faisst, president of the Pan-Hellenic Council, assisted by Miss Jenkins, of Columbus, with James Frink, vice president. The other officers are Victor Little, secretary, and William Terrell, treasurer. Jimmy Joy and his orchestra, of New York, furnished the music for the dances. The gym was artistically decorated by George Harold, architectural student, the decorations having been used throughout the entire series of entertainments. Many visiting belles attended the festivities, as well as young girls of the college set of Atlanta society. During the intermission, when the figure took place, participants were lined at one end of the gym. The girls were dressed entirely in white, and the young men in tuxedos, with the gold and white ribbons across the vests, gold and white being the school colors of Georgia Tech. The belles attending the dance were presented in the grand march, exquisite gold and white boudoir clocks, as gifts of the Pan-Hellenic council. The clocks were of gold finish, trimmed with white and under the face of the clock were small gold "P's" in raised gold letters.

George Harold, Jr., a Tech senior, who decorated the gymnasium, won, in addition to the Beaux Arts medal, a $1,000 scholarship offered by the University of Pennsylvania to architectural students for design ability. Take-Off Trouble Ruined Hamm's Jumps at Chicago--Alexander Crackers Take Third Straight, 13 TO 7

Well, boys you can buy them on the street two for a nickel now. The big question now is "Which one of those afternoon papers is THROWN IN?"

BANG, BANG, BANG--TAILS.

"Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious summer" by an exciting succession of Fox passes. A radio announcer in talking at random before Gallant Fox won the Belmont Stakes told everybody that King Richard the Third was a big man who had to have a perch on to mount and hence the expression, "My kingdom for a horse."

That delightful writer-friend of mine who insists he is elderly when he is younger than any of us pleasantly reminded the radio announcer that Richard the Third not only was undersized, but was a hunchback, instead of a giant. Then he added a word of praise for Clem McCarthy's description of "the great victory of Flying Fox."

To this merry collection was added the telephone call this morning which developed this query:

"Mistah Danfo'th, kin you tell me whethah any of dem othah ponies evah got in front of Gallopin' Fox Sadday? . . . Den of Gallopin' Fox wuz in front all de way? . . . Thank you, suh."

And now having violated a long standing aversion to calling attention to other's blunders I am waiting in a foxglovescent glow for the next time I lift a high foul to the catcher. Somehow I got by without being kidded on having "Paul" Marshall, chess champion; a "consolidation" match in a polo tournament; and "ending" in a baseball game in print all in one week.

FOR THE AMERICAN MERCURY.

Julian Harris adds to the errata-party by dashing across the office with a quotation in the Macon News, alleged to be from William Desau: "It is the friction of mind and mind which generates the spark of truth." The proper quotation, says Machiavelli Harris, is "The attrition of two honest minds often causes the spark of truth to scintillate."

It is quite possible that Julian is the only human being on the globe who knew the correct quotation (if he really is correct).

And HE TOLD!!

That was just a tough break for the editor of the Macon News.

Always when I get involved in one of these mistake-matinées, I recall those deathless words of Itza Boye, an Egyptian philosopher and undertaker of the fifth century before the Christian era:

"The bozo who goes around laughing about hieroglyphical errors in inscriptions on the pyramids eventually has to explain a black eye to the little woman."

I hereby wish to inform the editor of the Macon News that Julian Harris has volunteered to wear all my black eyes this summer.

P. S.--See where the Macon News has just sold out to the Telegraph. They must have taken their mistake to heart.

TIME ABOUT.

While Si Rosenthal, the Cracker outfielder obtained from Dallas in a trade for Ed Brown, is pounding the cover off the ball now, the news is that Brown has been put on the auction block by Dallas.

A few weeks ago drug store managers were panning Johnny Dobbs something awful for letting Brown go after the lanky boy started off and hit in 33 consecutive games.

Those who second-guess the second-guessers now have their time at bat.

THE TOUGHEST FIGHT.

Young Stribling is in Chicago today to begin training for his bout June 18 with Ought-To Von Porat. Pa Stribling indicated on passing through Atlanta Sunday that he was quietly planning to hire a few sparring partners for W. L. In other words, they were saying nothing and saving a lot of wood.

"Von Porat is a tougher man to beat than Phil Scott," Pa explained. "W. L. has to take a nice chance of getting his chin knocked off for a small piece of money, whereas for a larger purse he figures to beat Scott handily in England."

Which is about the truth. Von Porat was an awkward, frightened foreigner when Stribling beat him three years ago. Now Von Porat is a seasoned fighter with years of American experience and he packs more of a punch than any man in the division except George Godfrey and possibly Stribling.

OLD-FASHIONED MILLING.

"I have taken a lot of pains with the preliminary card for the show at the auditorium tonight," Promoter Eddie Hanlon says. "I have hand-picked the boys that will give the fans old-fashioned slugging. And if the Tommy Rios-Spike Webb bout and the Styles Attaway-Pug Avery fight do not have the customers standing up and yelling there is nothing in this stuff they call past performances. In years of promoting I have learned that people do not like to pay good money to see fancy boxing matches; they want hard hits and plenty of them."

In which latter observation the policeman-promoter spoke plenty.

England Eliminated Jean Borotra Upsets By Australia in Play Cochet in Brussels

EASTBOURNE, England, June 9. (AP)—Australia eliminated England today in their third round Davis cup tennis contest. H. G. Hopman, of Australia, beat H. G. N. Lee, of Britain, 6-3, 4-6, 7-9, 6-2, 6-4, in the deciding match.

As Australia had taken the two opening singles and lost only the doubles, this gave the invaders the necessary three victories.

PHILADELPHIA, June 9. (AP)—The ten-round boxing bout between Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia, and Ernie Schaff, Boston, scheduled for tonight, was postponed until tomorrow night because of inclement weather.

TAKE-OFF HURT HAMM IN JUMP, COACH THINKS

New Style Runway at Chicago Unbalanced Star's Stride.

By Ralph McGill.

Trouble with the take-off on his jumps prevented Ed Hamm from winning the broad jump at the national collegiate games Saturday, according to Coach W. A. Alexander who returned to Georgia Tech Monday from Chicago.

"Hamm jumped a couple of times well over 25 feet," said Coach Alex, "but he could never regulate that take-off. Each time he made his best jumps he fouled and on his best efforts he was jumping from behind the take-off board."

"The take-off was made of a sort of crushed stone and this made a difference of several inches in his stride. Had he been there for four or five days ahead of time to work on it he should have been able to regulate his leaps."

GRAYDON "FINE."

Doug Graydon, who won fourth place with a jump barely short of 24 feet, made a very fine showing, according to the jacket director of athletics.

"Graydon should add a foot or more to his jump before he finishes," said Coach Alex. "He made a fine showing. I don't know if he has enough speed to develop into a record-breaker but he should win a lot of events."

The two Tech stars and C. M. Furmer, North Carolina sprinter, were the only Southern conference athletes to place in the national events. Furmer finished fourth in the 220-yard dash in which Simpson, the Ohio state sprint champion, came within a tenth of a second of the world's record.

Simpson was defeated in the 100-yard dash by Frank Wyoff, Southern California champion, who established a new world record in the event, running it in 0.04, a full tenth of a second faster than the world's record.

BURNED FIELD.

This so angered Simpson, according to those who witnessed the race, that he burned up the field in the 220, which he won with ease, cutting a second off his previous mark in the event of 20.5 seconds.

Coach Alexander was busy Monday telling the graduates good-bye. Many of them called by his office Monday afternoon. He reported that most members of the football squad were busy seeking steel-gang jobs for the summer and finding them hard to get.

Coach Alexander will spend the summer working with the executive end of the job of being president of the National Coaches Association. His administration has already become noted as an important one in the work he is engaged in is likely to make his administration one of the most notable the association has had.

The current issue of the Athletic Journal carries an article on the forward pass contributed by Coach Alexander in which he predicts that forward passes and plays from pass formation will be used more and more in close games next fall.

Bill Tilden Wins Berlin Net Crown

BERLIN, June 9. (UN)—"Big Bill" Tilden, of Philadelphia, won a double victory here today, defeating Dr. Daniel Frazon, German national champion, in the finals of the Berlin city tennis tournament and forcing a base-line umpire to quit his post in mid-match.

Tilden became temperamental after several dubious decisions and objected strenuously, threatening to walk off the court. The umpire was replaced with a new official and Tilden settled down to win the match. The scores were 7-5, 8-6, 1-6, 7-5.

Borotra was exhausted and nearly collapsed at the end of the match.

Lumpkin and Foe Knocked From Ring

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 9. (AP)—A scheduled ten-round bout here tonight between Roy "Father" Lumpkin, former Georgia Tech football star, and Frankie Lennon, Cleveland, ended in the fourth round when both fighters were knocked out of the ring. Up until then, the milling had been fast and furious.

Lumpkin got back into the ring but Lennon did not. As Lumpkin was assisted by his seconds, however, members of the Kentucky boxing commission decided to call the bout "no contest," at the same time warning both fighters their purses.

Caught Off First, Horn Suspended

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 9. (AP)—Joe Horn, Nashville outfielder, was given an indefinite suspension today by Manager Clarence Rowland for what was termed "continued indifference to playing."

In the eighth inning of today's game with Birmingham, the Vols had the bases full with none out. They were nine runs behind. Horn, on first, strayed too far away and was trapped by a quick pop from Elsom, Baron catcher. In ensuing confusion among the base runners, Poole made a dash from third for home and was caught out. Horn advancing to second, Rowland's action against Horn followed.

"I am willing to overlook mechanical mistakes, but I cannot and will not tolerate mental mistakes," Rowland said.

WEBB AND RIOS CLASH TONIGHT; BOTH CONFIDENT

Two Scrappers in Good Shape and Plan Quick Finish for Other.

Spike Webb, who meets Tommy Rios, Mexican welterweight, tonight at the auditorium, believes he will continue his winning streak that has gone up broken for several months.

Rios, dark and grim-visaged, working fast in his last workout Saturday, showed enough form to convince those who watched that he had enough to warrant a win over any good welter. "I think I'll beat Webb," he said. "I want to show people here that I didn't get an unsound decision over Goodrich, the local hero here. I'll go after Webb hard. He may be tough but so am I."

The fight tonight gives every indication of being the sort of Atlanta like. There should be enough boxing to suit but fighting is expected to occupy most of time.

BONES IN.

Webb fights, boring in all the way. He has a rubber chin, so they say, much like the one owned by "Rubbery Jaw" Risko who can take lots of pounding and stay up. Webb owns a real right-hand punch and if he lands it he will put the Mexican down.

Rios wants to make a quick fight of it, seeking another bout with Goodrich. With those elements in it the fight should be fast and furious, an old-fashioned ding-dong affair between two good fighters.

Rios, who came here from Chicago for the fight, plans to return there for another bout he has earned. He will come back to Atlanta for other fights if he wins. He has been very impressive in his gym workouts here and fans are expected to be there in large numbers tonight to see him against a tough "tackler" like Webb.

The semi-windup, offering Stiles Attaway and Pug Avery over ten rounds, is another attractive fight. Attaway has always been popular here, having appeared in several bouts as the headliner. He was one of Spike Webb's victims but is still a good man on a card. Avery is also in good shape and ready for a real scrap. The semi-windup is expected to be a thriller.

REFEREE.

Jay Jarvis will referee the matches tonight. There are five fights on the card which Promoter Eddie Hanlon is offering.

Tickets are reported to be going briskly, the debut of the Chicago pair being credited with creating some interest.

Among the spectators expected to be at the ring-side is Ted Goodrich, who recently lost a decision at Chicago. Goodrich was matched with Rios but was declared unfit physically for the match because of an attack of illness.

The entire card which will go on at 8:30 tonight, is as follows: Tommy Rios vs. Spike Webb, 150 pounds.

Stiles Attaway vs. Pug Avery, 105 pounds.

Shootie Copeland vs. Happy Curtis, 105.

Harry Allen vs. Morris Warsaw, 140.

Clint Townes vs. Young Trowbridge, 125.

Curtis Gray vs. Red Veal, substitute bout.

Jay Jarvis, referee.

Paavo Nurmi Sets New 6-Mile Record

STAMFORD BRIDGE, Eng., June 9. (UN)—Paavo Nurmi, Finnish distance star, today shattered a world record which had stood for more than a quarter of a century, by running a six-mile race in 29 minutes 36.5 seconds.

The recognized record of 29 minutes 60.5 seconds was made in 1904 by Alfred Shrubbs, of Great Britain.

Nurmi's race was run as a special feature of a triangular track meet between France, Germany and England. Finland won the meet with 72 points, France scoring 40 and Germany 34.

Red Barron's Injury Recalls Heroic Days

"Original Red" Led Tech Football Team to Title in 1920 Despite Broken Jaw.

By Ralph McGill.

David Irenus (The Original Red) Barron is coming home today with a fractured jaw.

He is coming home from Chattanooga where, in the tenth inning Sunday as he went to bat for the Atlanta Crackers, a foul tip slid up his bat and crashed into his jaw.

And if Tech alumni blink their eyes too much this morning at the news it will be simply because the coffee is too hot—Red Barron with a fractured jaw—what a flood of memories that calls up!

Let's see—it was just ten years ago, and it doesn't seem that long, that a stocky, powerful boy with a set, chiseled face, played out a football game that crushed Vanderbilt 44 to 0. He played it out with a broken lower jaw, received in that game.

Not so many years ago, as years go, and a week after the Vanderbilt game, that same boy, his shattered lower jaw wired to the upper jaw with copper wire, stepped on a field at Pittsburgh to batter and hammer at a heavier, stronger line than his and almost beat them.

He had a wisdom tooth gone and through that they stuck a straw and he drank thin soup and broth. For about 30 weeks he did that and each Saturday he stepped on the field, his face encased in bandages, and helped scourge some team to defeat.

Centre fell, Georgetown was routed, Clemson, and Auburn—they all fell before the team led by the boy with the machine-like legs—Red Barron, wired together and playing magnificent football. And they won the conference title that year.

And Tech men who saw it have etched on their memories forever the sight of Red Barron playing that year; and Tech men who were with him on the team remember him in the dressing room—remember how he tore at Pittsburgh, battered Centre—there may be quite a few eyes that blink this morning as they call back 10 years.

GREATEST YEAR.

"He had perhaps his greatest year in 1920," said Coach Bill Alexander. The Man at the Flats, when informed of the injury to one of the greatest football players he ever had, "I don't see how they'll keep him out of baseball with just a broken jaw."

Football men of the 1920 season recall how Barron, his teeth wired together so that he could not talk, would sit and watch them eat steaks and vegetables with a wooden spoon and utterly miserable look on his face.

At one of the practices last season Barron was talking about those 10 long weeks when he could neither talk nor eat.

MANY DINNERS.

"People used to tell me how they were going to have me out to eat when I got well," he said. "And they Continued on Second Sport Page."

VICTORY GIVES ATLANTANS TIE IN SIXTH PLACE

Loose Playing Aids Dobbsmen; Rosenthal and Sheehan Hit Hard.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 9. Atlanta's fighting Crackers made it two straight over the Chattanooga Lookouts here today and went into a tie with them for sixth place. The score was 15 to 7.

In advancing to sixth place, a climb of three places in the space of a week, the Crackers hammered three pitchers hard while Clinax Blithen went the route for them. He was hit hard but he had a good lead and didn't have to hustle.

DOBS SETS PACE.

Johnny Dobbs set the pace. He has suffered much from the Lookouts this spring and is getting even. Whenever the Crackers seemed to slow up Johnny spurred them on and they burned the Lookouts down some more. The score doesn't tell the half of it. It doesn't tell how the Lookouts made three errors in the fourth to stake Atlanta to six runs, how another error gave a marker in the first, or how Clayton Van Alstyne was routed from the box, charged with seven tallies on six safe blows.

And another thing—it doesn't tell how the loss sent the Lookouts into a tie with Atlanta for sixth place, and how Chattanooga must take the next from the Crackers or stand a fair chance of dropping down next to the battered Bears.

SEVENTEEN HITS.

Atlanta garnered 17 safeties off Van Alstyne, Roy Sanders and Chick Howard. But Howard went in at the end of the fifth and for four innings held the Crackers scoreless. He gave up four hits. The Lookouts got 15. Now, Bolton and Treadaway got three each, Cliff a homer, double and single, Ray a triple, double and single. Sheehan, Rosenthal and Grimes all got a trio of safeties each. It was quite a day for swatting.

CRACKERS SCORE.

The Crackers got three of them in the first. Sheehan's walk, Rosenthal's single, Carley's triple and Lamotte's safety had something to do with it—about three run's worth.

The Lookouts scored a pair in their half. Matthews hit, "Goach" walked and Bigelow singled. Sheehan dropped Shirley's Texas leaguer. Bolton tied it up in the second when he hit one over Langford in center and raced around.

Then came the fourth and with it 10 Crackers at bat, four hits, a base on balls, three Lookout errors, and six runs. Two runs came in without a hit. Lamotte walked to start it and he fled out to end it. Van Alstyne was rushed to the dugout and Sanders came in to take more punishment.

Sharkey Works on Special Punches for Use Thursday Night

EX-GOB READY FOR BIG TEST, SAYS TRUMBULL

American Heavyweight Hitting Harder and Confident He Will Win.

By Walter Trumbull.

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., June 9.—(NANA) Jack Sharkey swung his feet over the side of the rubbering table, stood up in the costume worn by that grand old cardener, Adam, and prepared to dress.

"You look as well as you did for the Loughran bout," I said.

"I'm better," said Sharkey. "I'm in better condition than I ever was in my life."

"Look at those legs," said Al Lacey, Sharkey's trainer. "These writers are continually talking about those muscles stiffening up. Did you ever see muscles softer or in better condition?"

GOOD MUSCLES. I poked gently at the Sharkey underpinnings—you never can tell just how safe it is to poke even gently at a heavyweight during the final week of training—and found them even as Lacey had claimed, soft, long muscles. Arm and shoulder muscles were the same. Jack's skin is clear and has a good healthy color.

Some writers who have been here at camp for ten days, tell me that they believe Sharkey is past his peak. They say that five days ago he looked like a great champion, but that since then he has been growing steadily slower and less impressive. Such trainers of fighters as Lou Fink, Doc Bagley, George Engle and others, who were here today, disagree violently with any idea that Jack is overtrained. They think that he is wisely and deliberately taking it easy.

"People don't realize that I have trained for six weeks," says Sharkey. "The boys are writing about how hard Schmeling hits, how fast Schmeling is, how slow I am, and how he murders his sparring partners and I don't. They like to have me get out there and fight every afternoon. I'm not training for a fight here. The bout isn't scheduled until next Thursday night. I was ready last Tuesday. All I do now is to get out there and go through enough motions to keep in condition."

LOOKS STRONG. Frank Bruen, vice president of Madison Square Garden, and I drove up here together and to both of us Sharkey looked strong as a bull. This afternoon he worked, as usual, with Johnny Grosso, Paul Cavallier, the King Solomon. Cavallier has a bad arm and Sharkey treats him gently, using his apparently mainly to perfect his eye and timing. Solomon and Sharkey put on a clown act, which greatly pleases the crowd—and there was as big a crowd here today as the place will hold. Unless Sharkey had used the outside ring some of the spectators would have missed the show.

Grosso gives Sharkey a real workout, but today Jack was boxing flat, footed and with the utmost deliberation. He certainly was not fast and he paid little attention to what Grosso did, even taking a solid right to the head without showing any loss of temper. But it seemed to me that the Boston battler was engaged in a purpose of his own. He appeared to be engrossed in working out an idea of certain punches. When he did let a punch or two go he landed and landed hard. I am thinking especially of a couple of lefts I saw him shoot to the body and one right to the head which landed like a triphammer. Phil Scott, while complaining bitterly to

Rockne Returns For Examination

ROCHESTER, Minn., June 9.—(AP)—Knute Rockne, Notre Dame football coach, returned to Rochester today for an examination at the Mayo clinic.

He underwent treatment here several weeks ago for thrombophlebitis, or inflamed veins. Rockne, accompanied by Mrs. Rockne and their son, probably will remain a week or 10 days.

me of Sharkey's actions, after the fiasco of Miami, said: "He is a terrific fighter, y'know."

REAL HITTER. Never until the last year have I thought of Sharkey especially as a hitter; but I am beginning to believe that the leading oak of England may be right concerning Jack. His hitting has improved vastly in the past two years. And by the way, he spoke of Scott today.

"He had to be got out of the way, and nobody would fight him," Jack said today. "So I took him on, and look what he really cost me." Sharkey's advisers and those close to him believe that Jack will keep his temper and temperance under control in this coming bout. They say that he is really how much it means to him and that he is not underestimating his opponent, as he did Scott. Before the Miami disaster Sharkey thought of Scott as a less than average and time waster. He expected him to fall down at the first punch. Jimmy Johnston purposely kept Sharkey waiting for some time in the ring and Jack started the bout in a blinding rage and finished it in 10 seconds.

THE BIG CHANCE. But this time Jack has made some resolutions. Here is the chance at the title for which he has been waiting so long, and he has a burning desire to fight for it and win it as a champion should. Sharkey has an ambition to justify his belief in himself. At the height of Maloney's popularity in Boston, when many of his townspeople used to boo Sharkey, he used to say to Jack Buckley:

"They won't always boo. Some day I'll win the championship of the world, and I'll come back here and stuff it down their throats."

Since then Jack has won a certain measure of popularity and he values it, and he is determined to demonstrate that he deserves it. He regards himself as a champion and is confident that he will make the world recognize that he is a champion.

"I know I'm fit and ready, and I haven't been thinking of this fight," he said to me today.

GOOD SPOT. Sharkey wouldn't train anywhere except here, at Gus Wilson's place, because he has trained here for the last few fights he has won and has a bit of superstition about it. Besides, the place suits him in other ways. The house is near the road and there are always plenty of people about. Jack likes people about him, just as long as he can get away from them when he so desires. But he never would be content to train in some lonely spot.

General Phelon, of the New York boxing commission; Tom McAdams, of the Garden, and many others prominent in boxing were here this afternoon.

One thing Sharkey inquired about was the probable date. He wanted to know if it might run as high as $800,000. Frank Bruen assured him such a thing was an easy possibility.

Max Misses No Tricks When Business Is Up

German Heavyweight Says He Will Feel Better in Ring Than Jack Sharkey.

By David F. Egan.

ENDICOTT, N. Y., June 8.—(NANA) Throughout a two-hour conversation I had with Max Schmeling he was at all times honest and earnest.

"Do you think you'll win?" I asked him, expecting the usual confident reply.

"How can I say?" he asked. "Nobody can say who will win a fight. Sharkey can say he will win and I can say I will win, but who knows? If he wins, I congratulate him. If he loses, I congratulate him. I should lose."

Schmeling voiced his respect for Sharkey. "Sharkey knows his business," Max said. "He must be a good fighter, because he's fighting for the championship of the world. I don't skip rope, because I'm not training to skip rope. I don't punch the bag, and I don't do road work. But Sharkey knows his own business, and I know mine."

SOME MAX-IMS. Here are some of the remarks Max made in the quiet, rambling conversation we had:

"How you lot doesn't mean anything. It's how you are."

"In this country they put too much importance on weight."

"If he hits me, I'll go a chance to hit him. He has to open up to hit me, and then I'll hit him."

"The shortest way is the best way, so I throw my right straight to the chin, the shortest way."

"The eyes must walk with the hands together. Not walk, but work. The eyes must work with the hands together."

"I'll feel better than Sharkey in the ring. I have everything to win and nothing to lose. He has more chances, and he's having his last one."

Schmeling is reputed to be a sharp, unyielding business man. He was selling daily stories from the training camp to a syndicate of papers that cover the country. He read the contract carefully, until he plodded to the phrase which guaranteed him 50 per cent of the profits.

GOT GROSS PART. Max could not understand the "net" part of the business. A plain 50 per cent was all he wanted. The battle raged for four and a half hours, so the story goes, and Max got 50 per cent gross, which he understood very easily.

His motion picture, "Liebim Ring"—which means "Love in the Ring"—is said to have made more than $500,000 for the youthful business man in Europe. For the last month Max has been besieged with offers from American film companies for the rights to the picture, but Schmeling has steadfastly refused to sell, on the ground that the picture will be worth much more Thursday night.

For all his boyish look and friendly smile Herr Schmeling is a very smart and capable young man, inside the ropes and outside. He is pleasant and affable, but at the same time cool and calculating and stubborn.

To make his picture a little less sketchy, he was developed and brought to the screen by a Hollywood producer, whom Schmeling dropped shortly after their arrival here for Joe Jacobs, Billy McCarney and one or two more.

DISLIKES BULOW. The German heavyweight has not the slightest affection or regard for the man who made his career possible. Bulow visited his camp last week and expressed the hope that Schmeling would win.

"That's very nice of him," said Schmeling, but his eyes were hot as torches and his words as cold as ice. "Why shouldn't he win? He's a Jew. He'll get money from me."

His attitude toward Bulow—an attitude that seems utterly unjust to the situation—has been the subject of much speculation. He will enter the ring Thursday night as one of the most wholesome young athletes who ever competed for the prize of a world champion.

Schmeling will be a popular and a very dangerous underdog. He can punch, and a puncher is always dangerous. The big question seems to be, can he take it on the lung? Monte Sekyra, Risko and Paulino, his victims in this country, were not punchers. Sharkey isn't a great puncher, but he does have a right hand that comes down to the knees, and Sharkey's left and right contain the answer to a most disturbing question.

Here is Jack Sharkey and Schmeling compare on the anatomical chart. Look it out yourself.

Sharkey: Age 32, Weight 160, Height 6 ft. 1 in., Reach 73 1/2 in., Chest (normal) 42 in., Chest (stretched) 44 in., Neck 17 in., Biceps 14 in., Forearm 13 in., Wrist 10 in., Hand 9 in., Thigh 24 in., Calf 15 1/2 in., Ankle 10 in.

BRYAN GRANT WINS SINGLES AT COLUMBUS

Beats Feuer for Title; Mooney and Courts Lose Doubles.

COLUMBUS, Ga., June 9.—(AP)—Bryan Grant of Atlanta, won the singles championship of the annual Fort Benning invitation tennis tournament this afternoon, defeating Gus Feuer, of the University of Florida, in three out of four hard-fought matches in the finals.

The scores were 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3. Feuer got a measure of consolation by teaming with Turner, also of Florida, to win over Jack Mooney and Malon Courts, of Atlanta, 6-3, 4-6, 6-0, 4-6, in the doubles finals.

The final matches in the annual tournament seldom has produced closer battles than were fought out this afternoon. The Fort Benning courts this afternoon, each championship running to extra sets and only one love set being recorded in the two matches.

By defaulting Feuer, Grant retained the title he won last year. The Atlanta player a steady game throughout. Feuer did not rush the net as much as during his previous play in the tournament.

The victor covered the court in remarkable manner and made a number of very difficult returns. Feuer played a good net game.

They were erratic at times but made brilliant recoveries.

Sprint Crew Season Will Close Saturday

NEW YORK, June 9.—(AP)—The curtain falls on college sprint rowing for this year on Saturday with a triangular regatta for varsity and freshman eights between Princeton, California and Navy on Lake Carnegie at Princeton.

Predictions based on past performances indicate a struggle between the Navy and California for varsity honors while Princeton's yearlings, a crack boatload, are favored in the freshman event. Both races will be at a mile and three-quarters.

California's squad, 28 strong, arrived in Princeton yesterday and will practice morning and evening this week. The varsity will arrive at Princeton on Thursday.

After the regatta, Navy and California will travel to Poughkeepsie to train for the Intercollegiate Rowing Association there June 26.

(Copyright, 1936, for The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

A LITTLE SQUARE SHOOTING. It might be just as well in this impending Sharkey-Schmeling controversy to see that a foreign fighter gets something approaching a square shot, whoever wins.

You may still recall what happened to Paulino the night he fought Jack Delaney. The Spaniard nailed Delaney about two inches above the waistline with a left hook and much to Delaney's astonishment he was given the fight on a foul that no one else could see. Firpo was given the razzle-dazzle in every known way without any protection. Almost every one who saw the Scott-Sharkey fight at Miami admitted that Scott had been fouled at least twice. The boating and hooting of Crigui is an episode of the ring over here that is still remembered.

No wonder the opinion has spread around the world that no outside fighter can get a square deal in this country if any important title is at stake. We have proved too many times that this is true. We only have to prove it about once more to stand convicted as a nation that at least supports cheating.

It isn't particularly important whether Sharkey or Schmeling wins this next fight. But it is important that for once the lawyer at least gets something approaching an even break—no more and no less.

If this can't be done under existing conditions there is no reason at all for permitting the game to live. There has been entirely too much raw stuff spilled around the landscape already and most of it has happened in New York.

Just about one more fuzzy episode will be enough to break up the show, provided there is any element of the sporting side left.

THE NEXT ARGUMENT? It will be interesting to see just what national or international argument will break loose after this next fight.

Almost every heavyweight battle of any consequence has provided some wild and woolly debate that lasted for months.

The Dempsey-Firpo fight was all loaded up with arguments of one sort or another. So was the Dempsey-Sharkey fight in the great foul or no foul controversy. The wildest argument of them all broke loose over the famous long count in the second Tunney-Dempsey battle.

Those who saw the Sharkey-Scott clash admit without debate that Scott was fouled but most of them merely counter with the old "What of it?"

It is up to the New York state boxing commission to pick the squarest and most capable referee it can name and to see that this referee is backed up with the best judges available. If there is any trouble the answer goes back directly to the commission. The whole matter is extremely simple. There are certain rules that govern a fight and it is only necessary to see that these rules are enforced by both sides. If this can't be done, there is no reason for continuing a game that is beyond any control.

SCRAMBLED DOPE. With Schmeling's comparative inexperience and lack of boxing ability on one side and Sharkey's box score in the temperamental league on the other, there still remains no firm peg upon which to hang an opinion that really counts.

It is all well enough to say that Sharkey ought to win rather easily—if he fights his fight. But that happens to be an if that has surrounded the situation too often before.

Most of those picking Sharkey, on form, to beat Schmeling also picked Sharkey, on form, to beat Dempsey, Heeney and Risko, and to whip Scott without an argument.

WINNING LEGS. Frank Wykoff and Gallant Fox wrote their full share of speed history over the week-end with two performances that stamp them as champions.

Wykoff, who was Dink Templeton, the Stanford track coach, said that a hundred in nine and two-fifths wasn't far away and that when it happened the mark would go either to Wykoff of Southern California or Simpson of Ohio State. Simpson was 18 inches back of Wykoff when the young Californian covered ground fast enough to reach the nine and two-fifths peak and prove his place as the fastest human the track has shown.

No one knows yet just how good Gallant Fox is. He made a show of the field in both the Kentucky Derby and the Belmont stakes against the best that could be sent out to beat him. It isn't only what he has done, but the way he did it.

THE DIZZY RACE. Chasing the pennant in the National league so far has been one of the wildest two months of baseball. Teams crack and then come back to win a long string of games. Just as they get going they crack again. As the battle looks today it is a tough three-cornered war among Brooklyn, Chicago and New York. Brooklyn has already proved that her team is no part of a fluke and will be in the thick of the argument to the finish.

Chicago is making a desperate effort to stick along until Hornsby and other crickets can get back in. The Cubs are still one of the best and hardest fighting teams baseball has known for many years. When the Giants dropped 14 out of 18 games they looked to be fading from the skyline. Then they began to get some pitching and this turned into another story. McGraw now has a ball club moving along that will have to be figured in the running.

The Athletics still look safe enough in the American coral but the National league fight will be a steamy party all summer with at least three clubs and possibly four tied up in a tangle that only September will unravel.

Messrs. Jones, Horton Smith, Mac Smith, and Diegel move on Hoylake this week. Also Von Elm and Moe. The qualifying test breaks loose next Monday and Tuesday and the survivors lock wood and iron a week from Thursday in the 72-hole parade.

Two of the features of this open are Bobby Jones' bid for another championship and his meeting with Horton Smith, the young pro who led him at Savannah and who went overseas two months ahead to be ready for his next start. Jones is now United States open champion and British amateur champion. He has his chance to return wearing three crowns, which is about all the parking space one human head is supposed to hold.

MAXIE IS WEAK ON RING STYLE, SAYS LEONARD

German Invader Knows Too Little of Boxing for Position.

By Benny Leonard.

Retired Undeafened Lightweight Champion of the World.

SCHMELING'S TRAINING CAMP, ENDICOTT, N. Y., June 8.—(North American Newspaper Alliance)—I have had my last look at Max Schmeling in training. He has been particularly fortunate in coming through his training session (I couldn't very well call it a "siege") without suffering even so much as a bloody nose, in spite of the fact that he has used more different sparring partners than any other man who ever trained to fight for the heavyweight championship of the world.

And yet I am not satisfied with his boxing. He doesn't know as much about blocking or evading punches, nor as much about delivering them, as I think a heavyweight champion ought to know.

Max Schmeling hits a neat right-hand punch. That is about as far as his offense goes. He has done a fine job in developing his left hand and he shows to better advantage in the in-fighting than he did in his last fight in this country. He is aggressive, as always, but even now he hasn't that sustained attack I would like to see in a challenger for the title.

NOT DEMPSEY. Schmeling has been compared to Dempsey. Well, Dempsey was the kind of a fighter who sat in and kept whaling away until something dropped and that something never was Dempsey's hands—unless they dropped on the other fellow's body or head like exploding hand grenades. But Schmeling doesn't do it that way. He is always coming in, but when he gets in he seems satisfied to shoot over a few punches and then let the opponent back away out of a clinch, or else he will take time to set himself for another attack, which means he lets his man get away from him.

A few times in his training I saw Schmeling keep his attack going, but this usually was when the sparring partner was attempting to wrap punches with him. It may be that Max will fight differently when he gets in the ring with Sharkey. I expect he will. He'll have to or he can't win.

Max looked a bit slow to me after his two-day layoff the latter part of last week. When he resumed training on Saturday he boxed two rounds with Charley Belanger, and it looked to me as if Belanger were under somewhat of a pull at times.

BELANGER KITS. Belanger is a light-heavyweight, and it was apparent that he had a wholesome respect for the Schmeling whallop. But there were times when Charley stuck out a left that found its mark even though the Canadian in my opinion, wasn't the snappiest and in the punch he could have if he'd wanted to. Belanger got over a few left hooks, but he tried very few rights.

Lou Barba looked good against Schmeling in the two rounds he boxed with Max. The German did not bob and weave as much as he had been accustomed to in his earlier training. He stood up straighter, and if he fights this way against Sharkey he will be playing right into the American champion's hands.

Schmeling also fought more for the body. He tried a one-two punch, by driving a long left to the body from a crouching position and then shooting over a long right for the head with great force. But there were times when Charley stuck out a left that found its mark even though the Canadian in my opinion, wasn't the snappiest and in the punch he could have if he'd wanted to. Belanger got over a few left hooks, but he tried very few rights.

LEADS WITH RIGHT. Max still leads with his right, although he does not do this so much as he did when I first observed his training here. Strangely enough, he seemed to be more effective with this blow than with his others. His left hook, in the final stages, was a pretty formidable weapon. He certainly showed improvement with this blow considering that he is supposed to have known so little about using it when he began this training grind.

Personally, I think Max made a mistake in taking those two days off so soon before the end of his training. It would have been better to box a did. I had no many invitations that I couldn't fill them all, but when that football season was over and my jaw unwired I almost broke it again. I ate steaks until I could hardly look one in the face. I ate bread, cake and all the things I'd missed and I think I caught up in a week. I've never felt that I've been behind any on my eating in spite of the fact that I was out of the dinner lineup for about ten weeks."

Barron treats his new injury lightly. The ball struck beneath his left leg, according to reports from Chattanooga. He was ready to leave the hospital Monday but physicians advised that he wait until today and avoid the chance of taking a cold.

"It is not his old football injury," said Secretary Chick Roos Monday night, "but a slight fracture to the upper jaw. The lower one was broken when he played football. I asked the doctor about that specifically. He will be out for a week or two and not much longer. I think he'd like to play now."

Roos, who is ill with a cold and staying close to his room, said that Barron was already one of the most popular men on the club and that all the players felt his loss keenly.

"Where's Cassy?"

"She's in there, with him." The older woman jerked her head in the direction of the room off the kitchen that Cassy had turned into a play-room, years ago.

"Can I go in?"

"Joe Mikes was down at the switch with his car, one of the women said, "and he rushed him here. They never thought they'd get him into the house alive."

Dan took off his spotted coat and somebody took it away.

"They haven't even taken his stockings off yet," another woman contributed.

They all spoke in hushed tones, with occasional glances at the play-room door, which was ajar a few inches. In the brightly lighted, hot kitchen they moved like ghosts.

"Mrs. Wallace drove me here from the club," one of the women said. "It was about half past four, and we'd no sooner got here than she asked, 'Where's Tommy?'"

"She don't like him late because it begin to rain," the Swedish girl contributed, in a soft, wondering voice.

"Well," the first woman said, "we were sitting in here talking—this must have been round five—and she saw the car and she was so relieved. She said, 'There's Tommy now. Some one's given him a lift!' And with the Hellena boy opened the door, and said, 'Tommy's been all mashed to pieces, Mrs. Wallace.'"

Dan winced. The women gasped together.

"It was the boys' club day, but the director thought it was going to rain, and they couldn't like, so he dismissed them," the Pringle girl supplied. "So they all got fooling down at the tracks."

"Getting him out of the car—it was awful!" the other woman said. They aren't going to touch him again. Doctor Williams went to get Doctor Charles; they're both coming back.

"Are they going to get him into the hospital?"

"Oh, no, they can't move him," Mrs. Pringle said, almost impatiently, to Dan.

"Cassy asked the doctor how long it would be, and he said that Tom couldn't possibly live through the night."

She began quietly to cry, and the other women cried. Dan sat down at the table and rested his head on his hand.

"Does he know anything?" he asked presently.

"Oh, yes. They're giving him—stuff, you know," the neighbor woman said, "to ease his pain. But he doesn't seem to be in pain. Doctor Williams said he was completely smashed to pieces inside, and that sometimes when things were as bad as that they don't feel much."

"But he asked for you, the first thing. He must have been a little confused," Mrs. Pringle said, in tears but speaking with difficult self-control. "for he thought you were upstairs, taking a nap. He kept saying, 'When dad wakes up, I wish he'd come in,' and Cassy telephoned you."

Dan could imagine the sturdy little voice from the wrecked little body. "When dad wakes up, indeed! He winced again."

"I've never seen him look as handsome as he did this morning," Tommy's grandmother said. "Cassy always calls for him at school, or one of us does," she went on. "But this morning he reminded her it was club day. A bunch of these little fellows go out once a week with the teacher—the natural history class, they call it. They always take the school bus home."

White, serious and noiseless, a trained nurse came out of the sick-room.

"Mrs. Wallace heard your car," she said, without preamble to Dan. "She wants you to come in."

Dan followed her without a word, feeling himself big and wet and stumbling, in this place of women, and silence, and waiting.

Cassy was in a low rocker—the rocker she had when she was nursing Margaret—beside the bed. She had on a dark brown dress, with a fold of chiffon at the open neck, and folds of chiffon at her wrists, and her rich dark hair had slipped to a curly coil on her shoulders. She looked over her shoulder as Dan came in, and her blue eyes widened, but without a smile.

"Don't move," Tom said, her quiet voice said warningly. And at the sound of it a torrent of love and agony rose in Dan's heart, and he began to tremble with exquisite pain.

He went to the foot of the bed and managed a smile. Tom, lying flat on his back, smiled back from a lean little face that had paled under sunburn.

"You look all right, Tom!" Dan said, in an uneven voice.

"I'm all right," Tommy whispered. "Don't move," Cassy said again, inflexibly. "He must not move," she said to Dan, over her shoulder. "If he feels that he is going to cough again, he is going to tell me, and then we're to hold him."

"Something broken?" Dan asked.

"We don't know. We think a rib or two are broken; they couldn't touch him."

He glanced significantly down at his hands, and Dan's look followed hers. He saw that the child's hard, grubby young hands, and Cassy's thin, brown, memorable fingers were welded together with drying red enamel, and that the blanket was stained with splashes of the same ominous brick color.

"Can it be done?" he breathed.

"We don't know," answered Cassy. "Taking him out of Joe Mikes's car," she said, "and then again—about half an hour ago, when the doctor had rounded him."

"Once more," she began again, after a silence. "Once more would be the end."

"She don't say 'the end,'" but Dan's heart finished the phrase.

"Just keep perfectly still, Tom. Don't move. It won't be for long, dear. But if we could just stay in this miserable cut inside, whatever it is, in chance to heal over—even the tiniest bit—"

"It's just like a nosebleed, sweet-heart. You know how still you have to keep until it stops?"

Her tone was composed and quiet; there was nothing dramatic in voice or manner.

The boy was like his mother, but he would be taller some day. His hands were as big as hers now. His face was lean and lighted, as Cassy's was, by sapphire-blue eyes in black lashes; he looked all boy at seven and a half, but Dan noticed the baby softness and straightness of the throat that his opened shirt exposed.

He was only partly undressed, he still wore wet, bloody, mud-stained little linen knickerbockers, but they had been unbuttoned at the knee, and loosened at the belt, not to bind him. Against the white pillow lay the great mop of soft black plumes that was his hair.

"We were on top of the car, down near the tanks," Tommy suddenly volunteered. "And I jumped, I don't think I oughter jumped."

"Why did you jump?" Dan asked, in a gruff, gentle echo of his own voice.

"'Cause Ben said maybe they were startin' for Chicago."

"Another time," Dan said mildly. "I wouldn't jump."

"No, sir, I won't, dad," Tommy promised.

A silence. The two doctors had come noiselessly in; Cassy looked at them expectantly, but did not move.

"Dad, I thought you were upstairs, asleep. I forgot you'd gone away."

"You were sort of doze, I guess."

"Don't move, Tommy."

"I won't, mom. Dad, can you stay here now?"

"Yes."

"Ain't you goin' back?"

"Nope."

He shut his eyes, and opened them again, with all a little boy's adoration for his mother in their blindness.

"Gould I go to sleep, mom?"

Her glance flickered to the shadows for a tenth of a second, returned, she nodded. And Dan knew from the deepening pallor of her weary, patient face that the doctors, behind him, had merely shrugged. It didn't matter what Tom did, now.
